Carranza Tells Why He Ordered Deportation of the Spanish Minister

THE HAGUE (via London), Feb. 13.—The German legation has again warned neutral vessels against entering the war area around the British Isles, as defined by the German admiralty, and to the original note adds the following:

"Since Germany, following the example of Great Britain, declared as a war zone on and after February 18, British and Irish waters, the British have declared all the ports of England war ports and have justified the use of neutral flags on merchant vessels."

"Moreover, according to a reliable source, a great number of British merchantmen have been armed in order to destroy German submarines by shells or by ramming them. They have also been ordered to sink German submarines by ramming them or by using their own torpedoes."

"Germany, therefore, is again obliged to warn all neutral ships against entering English coast waters after February 18, as from that date the German admiralty will prosecute the war with all means at its disposal against British war ports and British armed merchant ships."

"Neutral vessels which are then still within the war zone will run the same risks as if they pursued a course through sea battles between England and Germany, of which the date and place could not have been made known, and will bring risks upon themselves for which Germany cannot take the responsibility."

"The route around the north of Scotland, owing to the depth of the waters, cannot be endangered by mines. There, as well as in the waters of the North Sea, with the exception of British waters and German bays, neutral shipping will not be endangered by the measures the German admiralty is adopting."

Expected Protest.
BERLIN, Feb. 13. (via London).—The German foreign office after studying the American note respecting the declaration by Germany of a war zone in the waters around Great Britain and Ireland, states that the terms are much friendlier than previously had been expected by reason of the incomplete newspaper dispatches published here.

"The foreign office had not anticipated that the United States would accept the German position without objections and it even recognizes that from the American standpoint certain of the points raised are quite justified. Germany, however, it is declared, intends to adhere to its own viewpoint. Various officials, diplomatic, naval and military whose opinions have been sought profess to see no elements of danger in the situation and are convinced that the naval campaign can be conducted on the lines laid down in the admiralty proclamation without involving difficulties between the United States and Germany."

German Paper Bitter.
LONDON, Feb. 14. (Sunday).—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam quotes an editorial from the Frankfurter Zeitung of February 12, which is commenting on the summaries of the American note, says:

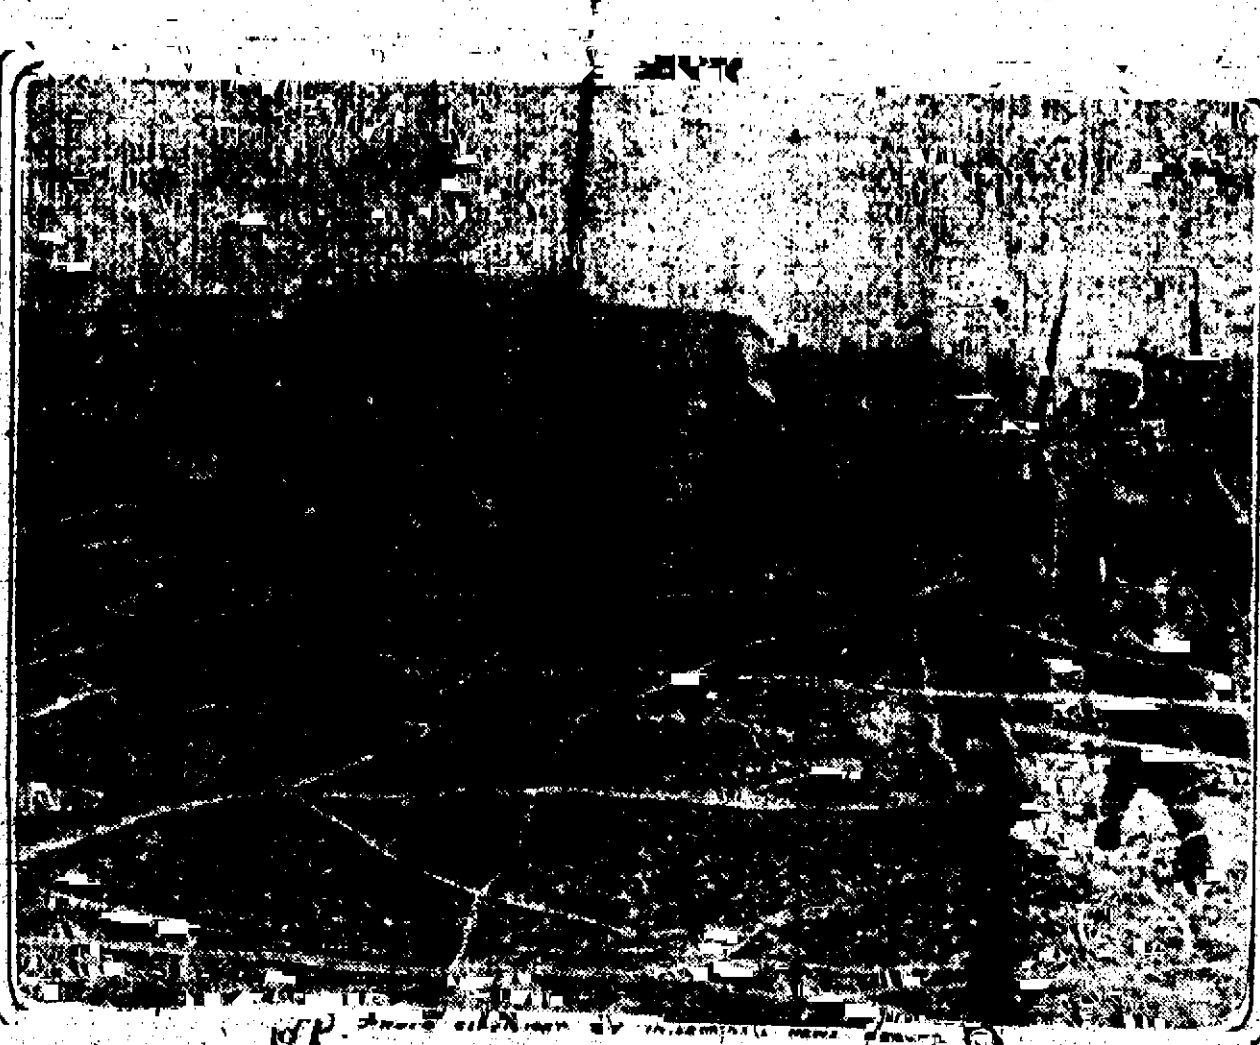

"President Wilson's note to England does not deserve the name of a protest. It is really, like the president's entire policy so far toward England, Washington's recipe for its relations with the British is."

"Wash his fur, but don't wet him." Washington, however, appears to have another recipe for Germany. If certain points in America do not understand that we are fighting for existence and that we cannot be guided by what Mr. Bryan, whose son-in-law and sympathizer are in the English army, considers good form, we cannot help them. In six days from today the sea around Great Britain and Ireland will be for the German warships, including submarines, a war zone and hostile merchant vessels encountered will be destroyed."

The article concludes with the following reference to the United States: "A state which day and night works in the production of cannons, bombs and armored motor cars for our enemies and by way of amusements and for peace in the churches need not expect that its warnings will paralyze the German navy."

Answer to Be Friendly.
BERLIN, Feb. 13. (via London).—The German foreign office has received the American note and has replied to it in a friendly manner. The German government in its note to Germany relative to the German proclamation creating a sea war zone will be given in the same friendly tone as that of the American note, says an official source here.

BLACKLEG ATTACKS COLORADO ANIMALS

Cattle Stricken Near Springs;
Lauck Urges Ranchers to Vaccinate Stock

County Agriculturist, W. H. Lauck and George W. Dickey, a veterinary surgeon, spent all of last night on the plains near Crows Roost, several miles southeast of Colorado Springs, vaccinating calves and yearlings that have been attacked by blackleg.

Lauck received word late last night that a number of head of stock had been stricken, and half an hour later he and Dr. Dickey were on their way to Crows Roost. He says that all owners of cattle vaccine calves and yearlings also 1-year olds at once in an effort to prevent the disease from spreading. By his work last night Lauck hopes to save the lives of many cattle and keep the disease confined to one locality.

Black-quarter, or blackleg, as it is more commonly known, is an appetitive disease that attacks young cattle and sheep. Its presence is indicated by lameness, one of the forelegs swelling, and after death being suffused with black blood which also is found throughout the body. The disease, according to authorities, is due principally to undrained fertile pasture, or to the too rapid transference of cattle from poorer to richer soils. It is difficult to cure, but may be prevented by thorough drainage or by giving regular doses of niter to all the animals. Blackleg is common in Colorado, Texas, Nebraska and Kansas.

MERCHANT KILLED BY UNKNOWN ROBBERS; $6,500 OVERLOOKED

Las Animas County Business Man Murdered Five Miles
From Walsenburg

WALSUMBURG, Colo., Feb. 13.—William Dick, president of the Pinon Supply company, was killed and his clothing robbed by unknown persons late today near La Veta. Dick was carrying $6,500 in currency, which was overlooked, from Walsenburg to Oakview to be used in settling checks of men employed by the Oakview Coal company.

The blackleg epidemic first was from Walsenburg and was made apparently by two Mexicans, according to reports received here. Three bullets pierced his body. Officers and citizens from Walsenburg are searching for trace of the holdups.

It has been customary for the Pinon Supply company to cash the pay checks of the miners in that vicinity. Dick left Walsenburg this afternoon in an automobile with funds for that purpose.

The first news of the killing of Dick was brought to the sheriff at Walsenburg by Gabriel Murphy, a lawyer. A posse of citizens was rushed to the scene of the shooting. At dusk tonight shooting was heard in the vicinity of the killing. According to Murphy, he was following Dick along the La Veta road at a distance of half a mile.

When Dick's machine drew near a bridge over an irrigation ditch Murphy declared he saw two men come from under the bridge and open fire on Dick's machine at a distance of 50 yards.

The currency was found locked in a compartment in the rear of the machine.

Dick had large business interests in Huachuca county and was prominent in lodge circles. He was a director of the First National bank of Walsenburg, president of the Huachuca Trading company, and the Walsenburg Mercantile company.

SCHMIDT, ALLEGED DYNAMITER, CAUGHT

Wanted for Part He Played in Destruction of Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Matthew A. Schmidt, 34 years old, was arrested here tonight as a fugitive from justice on an indictment found in Los Angeles in October, 1910, charging him with having been implicated in dynamiting the Los Angeles Times building. The arrest was made on upper Broadway, where detectives had traced him after a search of four years.

Detective William J. Burns, who accompanied the officers making the arrest, said the indictment charges that Schmidt was one of several men who went with J. B. McNamara to the works of the Giant Powder company in California and purchased 1,000 pounds of dynamite.

When arraigned before Magistrate McQuade, the prisoner said he was a mechanic and 34 years old, but refused to answer the other customary questions. After the arraignment, however, the magistrate said the man had confessed to him in his chambers that he was Matthew A. Schmidt, as alleged in the Los Angeles indictment.

Detective Burns stated that the arrest of Schmidt was the outcome of an investigation into a bomb explosion which occurred in a six-story flat house on Lexington avenue in this city on July 4 of last year, and which killed three persons, injured several others and partly wrecked the building. Detectives who examined the premises became convinced that the bomb used was of the same type as that used in blowing up the Los Angeles Times building, and similar to those placed at the homes of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, owner of the Times, and of the secretary of the manufacturers' association. The investigators soon struck a trail which led to the arrest of Schmidt.

The three men charged with purchasing the dynamite from the Giant Powder company were J. B. McNamara, M. A. Schmidt and David Kaplan. A worldwide search was made for McNamara's associates, and their capture was reportedly reported on many occasions. Until the arrest here tonight both had eluded arrest.

GERMAN VICTORY IN EAST PRUSSIA TERRIBLE BLOW TO RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN

Armies Are Seriously Crippled by Master Stroke of Kaiser's
Military Strategists

American Notes to England and Germany
Occupy Prominent Part in World of War;
Great Britain Says Neutral Flags Will Be Used Only in Case of Emergency

LONDON, Feb. 13. Berlin is celebrating the evacuation of East Prussia by the Russians, which is hailed in the German capital as another great victory for Field Marshal Von Hindenburg. England is not attempting to hide her elation at the success of her army's raid on the German positions in Belgium, and all Europe is eagerly discussing the American notes to Great Britain and Germany and contemplating what the replies will be.

Great Britain has already intimated that British merchant ships have been advised to use neutral flags only in case of emergency and no general use of such flags is anticipated.

The German minister at The Hague has issued another warning to neutrals to the effect that in view of the alleged declaration of all the British ports as war ports and the use of neutral flags by British ships, it would be dangerous for neutral merchantmen to visit the prescribed waters after February 18.

So far as the East Prussian situation is concerned, the Russian official report indicates that the Russians, having evacuated the greater part of the German province, are making a stand on or near their frontier, whether for a pitched battle or only to delay the German advance it will take a few days to tell.

On the last occasion that Von Hindenburg drove them from East Prussia, the Russians fell back to their fortified lines between the German and the German frontier where they defended the Germans. On this occasion, however, they have had more time to prepare their positions and may give battle before the fortifications are reached. The Russians already claim to have repulsed one German attack near Lyck.

Throughout Poland, where fierce fighting has occurred during the past week, the battles now consist of artillery engagements, while in the Carpathians, fighting of more or less severity continues. The Austrians are making repeated efforts in an effort to capture the heights of Kozulovka, at Kozulovka, which they won on Tuesday last Sunday. The Austrians, however, have not been able to capture the heights, and the Russians are apparently hopeful of capturing them. On the rest of the Carpathian front, the Russians seem to be making progress.

Turks Annihilated.
The Egyptian army has just placed to the credit a brilliant feat by annihilating a force of 200 Turks and Arabs offered by the Germans, who were preparing to attack Tor at the entrance of the Gulf of Suez.

In the view of British experts, the air raid on Belgium proves that the British air force is superior to the German and have a great advantage in the possession of a base on the continent as well as in England, for while the British if they are unable to return land in France, the Germans must make the round trip across the sea. In France, Flanders and Alsace there has been little or no fighting of importance so far as the official reports disclose.

It is announced that the leaders in the South African rebellion are to be put on trial for treason and in addition to other punishment may be used for looting and for damage done by themselves or their followers, while the men of means will lose all their property. Meanwhile, the government has announced its intention to push with vigor the campaign against German Southwest Africa.

FEW BOAT RUNS NOW EXCEED 400 MILES

Tyrod Boat Service Greatly Falls Off on Account of Late Railroad

By JONATHAN WINFREED.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Long runs by through fast steamers, are things of the past.
This statement is a report of the department of agriculture of an investigation recently made on the inland boat service of the United States, pointing out the passing of one of the picturesque features of the country. The railroads and electric lines have made such inroads on the inland boat service, that the river traffic in the United States now is generally local.

It was found by the department investigators that a few hundred miles usually is the maximum run for any steamer and one of 400 miles or more is an exception. On only 25 of the 102 routes for which this information was available was the average rate of speed more than 10 miles an hour and on 37 it was less than six. It is pointed out that an average of six miles an hour totals from 75 to 100 miles in a night's run, which is considered a good rate of speed for local freight traffic on the rivers.

The Hudson river and Chesapeake bay lines cover the principal routes of steamboats in the east, it is stated. There is considerable variety of traffic on the Hudson, while in the Chesapeake the traffic radiates principally from the cities of Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk and smaller intermediate points. Through service between Baltimore and Norfolk, Baltimore and Philadelphia, Norfolk and Washington and Norfolk and Richmond is maintained throughout the year.

Mississippi Longest Run.

As in the days of old, the longest routes are to be found in the Mississippi valley. For example, from Cincinnati regular lines run down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers as far as Memphis, Tenn.

The investigators found another important river port at St. Louis, from which regular lines run as far in one direction as St. Paul on the upper Mississippi, and in another down the river to Memphis. Other lines reach Kansas City, Peoria, Ill., and mount the Tennessee river as far as Watertown, Ala.

From Memphis, through boats run to Vicksburg, where they connect with boats for New Orleans. This metropolitan of the south is the center of several important routes in addition to the direct one up the Mississippi. There is one line which follows the Red and Black rivers to Harpersburg, La. Various other routes traverse the network of rivers, bayous and canals in southern Louisiana, as far west as Bayou Teche and as far north as the Red river. Lake Pontchartrain also supports considerable traffic.

The important system of waterways on the Pacific coast consists of the rivers emptying into San Francisco bay, which makes it easy of access by boat to a rich truck region not touched by rail. A second coast system consists of the Columbia river and its tributaries. From Portland steamers run down the Columbia to Astoria and up as far as Celilo. Above the falls near Celilo, other boats reach points on the upper Columbia and Snake rivers.

The report also shows the relation of freight rates on this river traffic to the farm price of the various products, which were found to vary greatly with the character of the products. It was learned that on a 25-mile route in Maine the rate on a barrel of apples was 15 cents while the average farm price was $1.13, the freight rate in this instance being 1.3 per cent of the farm price. On cotton traffic in the south the percentage ranged from 0.9 to 3. Eggs varied from 0.5 to 10 per cent, and hay, because of its great bulk, frequently was charged from 10 to 40 per cent of its value on the farm. In the case of wheat the percentage ranged from 2 to 15 per cent.

BERLIN (via London), Feb. 13.—The success of the German in East Prussia emphasizes, according to the view held here, the quiet strategy of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, which is designed to strike an enemy when and where the blow is least expected.

As the Russian strength on the Warsaw front proved too great and a flanking movement became necessary, Field Marshal von Hindenburg decided to choose the left wing, owing to the better equipment of East Prussia with railways, and because the colder weather offered better prospects for successful operations, the snow being no hindrance.

Von Hindenburg called his plans by reinforcing the Austrians in the Carpathians in order to make a strong diversion and misled the Russians into thinking that the real flanking movement was to be carried out there. Meanwhile, he assembled a strong army above the Masurian lakes, composed for the most part of fresh recruits.

Major Morabit, the military critic of the Tageblatt, calls attention to the fact that the Russians had strongly fortified their position which, he points out, only enhances von Hindenburg's tactical achievement.

In the opinion of this critic, Grand Duke Nicholas evidently intended to carry out an offensive movement after breaking the German lines and hence the defeat must have a very unfavorable effect upon the general Russian plans for this, he adds, was "a defeat in the fullest sense of the word," as evidenced by the immense body and the hasty evacuation of the position mentioned in the official bulletin.

Russians Miscalculated.
 Major Morabit thinks that one of the first effects of this success will be seen in the region north of the Vistula, where the Russians have been advancing toward the Russian front.

"This movement," continues the writer, "evidently was designed to relieve the pressure on the Warsaw front. He miscalculated, however, the strength of the possible German advance from West Prussia, which here, too, is already shattering the Russian general plan of campaign as shown in the operations to the north and west of Sierpce where the Germans captured hundreds of prisoners in two days' fighting, ending with the occupation of Sierpce."

"These successes in the eastern arena prove the superiority of the German talent for organization which causes painful astonishment for the Russians. This talent is not connected with any one name, so far as it is now understood; it is not the work of any individual and prominent leader, like Napoleon a century ago. These great German achievements in creating new armies will perhaps be attributed later to the genius of a single great organizer. At any rate, our capacity for creating armies and putting them on the right spot proves that the German general staff is continuing to utilize the experiences gained in the Franco-Prussian war."

Nation in War With Heart.
 "But what a different aspect is presented by the present war in matter of organization. Prepared by incessant intellectual and creative work, executed with perfect self-confidence, and grounded upon a whole people's spirit of self-sacrifice in peace and war, a movement has resulted which must succeed."

"Whoever had imagined a few months ago that German armies would be operating on the Roumanian frontier and in the Carpathians would have regarded as a fantastic dream. Whoever had tried to demonstrate in figures the numbers of German troops now actually rolling toward the front, believed even by a large part of the active army officers. The darkness of the situation with enemies on all sides have given the German people the power of a giant who advances from one victory to another."

The military expert of the Mittag-Zeitung, Major von Schrellenshofer, writes: "The victory must have a decisive effect upon the general operations. The Germans seized the initiative and have achieved results which will have lasting effects and bring Germany and Austria a long step toward a final decision. Their operations have developed in an extraordinarily favorable manner and the foundations have been laid for further successes. The latest victories in East Prussia, the Carpathians and Bukovina are the first steps toward further blows for crushing the enemy."

The military specialist continues: "Russia has virtually decided, owing to the vast expenditures caused by the war, to make the municipal income tax 50 per cent."

GERMANY ASKS NEUTRAL SAILORS FOR U. S. SHIPS
 WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—German officials, according to the United States State Department, have asked the United States to allow the use of its ships for the purpose of neutral sailing.

This policy caused no surprise in official circles, and was believed to be a sequel to the decision for the removal of sailors from the American steamer Greenfield after she delivered a cargo of cotton at Bremen. As neutral vessels may touch in enemy ports or return to Germany, the German military authorities are anxious to prevent the use of U. S. vessels from conveying military information.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Cabinet officers, political dignitaries and men of distinction in private life were the guests of the Gridiron Club at its festive tonight and saw and heard themselves parodied, lampooned and caricatured in the ways they should not.

Edgar C. Snyder, Washington correspondent of the Omaha Bee, was designated as President. Chauncey C. Reinhard of the Brooklyn Eagle, Harry J. Brown of the Portland Oregonian and Arthur J. Stunt of the Newark Evening News were declared members and seated.

A high court of justice held sway for a while during an intermission in the course of the dinner and half a dozen presidential candidates were brought before the bar to answer to indictments. The first trio comprised Whitman, Herrick and Borah, the complainant was Woodrow Wilson, who charged that the Republican party has not had a new idea for 20 years.

Whitman Has an Idea.
 Under examination by Common People, the prosecuting attorney, Whitman confessed that he had had an idea he wanted to be president.

Judge: That isn't your idea, it's the idea of William Jennings Bryan.
 Whitman: I've got another idea, the governorship of New York is the stepping stone to the presidency.

Judge: That idea isn't yours either; it was used over 20 years ago by Grover Cleveland.
 Herrick, the next, declared he had an idea; it was that "distinguished diplomatic service is the road to political perfection."

Judge: That's an exploded idea, Jimmy Gerard proved that.
Borah's Definition.
 Borah, the next, declared his idea consisted in the contemplation of methods pursued by men who, with far less natural equipment than myself, have succeeded by hook or crook in reaching the White House.

The court, however, held that an idea was a confused mental image, an intangible something. There isn't a soul animal and if there is it can't be produced in court, so the defendants are found not guilty.

Bryan, McAdoo and Clark were next called before the court.
 Common People: Can you start the mills running?
 McAdoo: Well, I've got the backs of the mill.

Clark: I was asked to leave hard times.
 Clark: The Baltimore convention.
Bryan Talks on Publicity.
 Bryan was last under examination. Common People: Do you expect the mills to start running again?
 Bryan: Oh, yes.
 Common People: And will you also start running?

Bryan: I refuse to incriminate myself.
 Judge: The court finds that all these parties have a single idea, which is to get into the White House.

During the evening there were many jokes by the Gridiron club and choruses were dedicated to Charles M. DeWitt, "The One That Rode to the White House," and another to Myron T. Herrick, "So Long to Herrick and Short to Borah Tonight."

ENGLAND IS PREPARING REPLY TO LATEST NOTE
 Position Probably Will Be That No General Order for Use of U. S. Flag Was Issued

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The British foreign office is preparing a reply to the American note concerning the use of the American flag on the steamer Labrador. The reply will be forwarded to Washington in a few days, probably before the British note is received.

The British note has never admitted the German charge that a general order was issued by the British government that British ships could use the flag of a neutral state. Neither has the note confirmed the rumor that the British was ordered to use the neutral flag.

The position of the British government, as well as the British reply, probably will be that the captain of the Labrador was not permitted to use the flag of a neutral state should an emergency demand a change to the flag of the ship.

JUDGE DAYTON ENEMY OF UNITED MINE WORKERS
 Called Union Leaders "Criminal Conspirators" Showed Bias in Trial of Contempt Cases

FARMERSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 13.—That Federal Judge Alston G. Dayton of the northern district of West Virginia, from the bench referred to members of the United Mine Workers of America as "criminal conspirators" was the testimony of Attorney John P. Palmer of Wheeling at the session tonight of the congressional subcommittee, which is investigating Judge Dayton's official record.

Palmer, who was on the stand more than two hours told of Judge Dayton's rulings against members of the miners' union. Several defendants in the contempt proceedings arising out of the sale of the West Virginia Phosphate Coal company against the miners' union went on the stand and told of incidents in Judge Dayton's court room. Palmer stated Judge Dayton in his opinion had shown judicial bias in the contempt cases. He declared that Judge Dayton from the bench told him he had made untrue statements.

Because of the feeling prevailing tonight over Munroe's death, Robinson was started out of the room and locked in a room nearby, the name of which was not divulged.

There is little likelihood of a reversal of the labor troubles of last year, according to the authorities, the shooting of Munroe, and the fact of being the champion of and being between the miners and the phosphate.

There is little likelihood of a reversal of the labor troubles of last year, according to the authorities, the shooting of Munroe, and the fact of being the champion of and being between the miners and the phosphate.

The speaker said he believed that if he kept on he had clear the world will deliver into our hands the solution of these great problems.

WEST ON HIS WAY TO MEXICO FOR WILSON

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 13.—Dwight West, who arrived here today from Washington and who expects to leave for Mexico on a line of two as the personal representative of President Wilson, said tonight he first would pay a visit to the headquarters of General Villa. After an interview with that chief, Mr. West will tour northern Mexico, calling upon various revolutionary leaders before going to Vera Cruz, Tampico or Mexico City.

Mr. West declared he was not going to Mexico as a diplomatic emissary, but as a peace man who will be offered to the leaders of the warring factions.

He said that he will interview all the leaders and ascertain their views and ideas of pacification. He merely will report what he has heard. He will make few suggestions, as coming from the administration at Washington.

PLANS ON FOOT TO CUT SHIP BILL TALK

Democratic Leaders in Both Houses Will Endeavor to Limit Debate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—(Special.) Democratic leaders in both houses of Congress are planning to limit the debate on the shipping bill. The bill is a measure to reduce the cost of shipping goods from the United States to foreign countries. The bill is expected to pass the House of Representatives, but it is still in the Senate.

House Plans Campaign

In the house, preparations were made to rush a compromise bill through under special rule after it has been approved by a caucus of house Democrats next Monday night. The caucus is expected to be held on Monday night.

In the senate, the closure rule proposed by Senator Norris of Nebraska was under debate all day. Senator Burton occupying the floor virtually the entire session, his discussion ranging from criticism of alleged executive interference with legislation to the merits of various projects contained in the rivers and harbors appropriation bill.

Under Representative Padgett's proposed special rule the house could dispose of the bill at one sitting. It includes the completed administration compromise, embracing the Weeks naval auxiliary bill, the Gore shipping bill and an amendment combining the two and would absolutely prohibit other amendments. The caucus Monday is expected to bind the Democratic majority to support the bill as a party measure.

Democratic leaders were confident the revised bill would go through the house without serious difficulty. Senate Republicans, however, asserted the compromise failed to eliminate the two principal objections and would meet the same obstructions in the senate as the pending bill. They asserted the compromise would permit the purchase of beligerent owned ships and would allow the government to continue indefinitely in the shipping business.

While insurgent senate Democrats attended the morning closure conference they were outspoken in their opposition to support the rule to limit debate. Other Democratic senators, including Overman, Hoke, Smith of Kansas, Bryan and Swanson, also opposed closure.

In the course of his remarks tonight Senator Burton asked Senator Fletcher, in charge of the shipping bill, why the administration was so opposed to the specific prohibition of the purchase of beligerent-owned ships.

Looking for Trouble

"That would not be a wise or patriotic course," said Senator Fletcher, and it would be writing into the law denunciation of a principle upon which we always have looked with pride. "That shows that you are looking for trouble," said Senator Burton. "And that you are willing to make trouble. Senators on this side owe it to the country to save it from the peril that such a bill would bring."

"We would fall in our duty if we did not oppose to the end a proposal loaded with such dangers," Senator Burton introduced resolutions calling upon the secretary of the treasury for information as to what of interned ships and providing for a senate investigation as to what offers of ships for sale have been received or what solicitations have been made by agents of the government for such offers.

Senator Jones will seek action Monday on his motion to discharge the commerce committee from consideration of his shipping bill substitute which might operate to get the matter again before the senate but will not stop the filibuster.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS MEAN END OF PANICS

Hamlin Says Government Institutions Protect Interests of Citizens at All Times

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Under the federal reserve system we shall see no more financial panics, said Charles E. Hamlin, governor of the federal reserve board, at the annual banquet of the Chicago real estate board tonight. He added that confidence in the banks is the opening of the federal reserve banks in November were probably the most important in the history of our country.

Discussing the true function of the new banks he said: "It is not to meet emergencies but, so far as possible, to prevent emergencies from arising and while ordinarily they do not and are not intended to get into the business of the banks, yet they are to be ready to take action through the exercise of the powers which will be given to them by the people of the United States."

It is often said that the federal reserve banks are "banks" but this is not true. They are not banks in the ordinary sense of the word. They are not banks in the ordinary sense of the word. They are not banks in the ordinary sense of the word.

BRITISH ANNIHILATE 200 TURKS AND ARABS

Suddenly Attack Station of Tor at Entrance of Gulf of Suez

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A force of 200 British troops under German officers who were preparing to attack the British station of Tor at the entrance to the Gulf of Suez was suddenly attacked and killed or taken prisoner yesterday by a British force. The British force was a British official report from Cairo. One hundred soldiers were taken prisoners and of the others it is believed that not one escaped death.

The official reports that in January 50 Turks and two German officers approached Tor, believing that the place was undefended. Finding Tor garrisoned by 200 Egyptian soldiers, they sent for reinforcements. These arrived and a force numbering a little over 200 occupied a village of the south of Tor.

On their arrival becoming known a small detachment of British troops landed in their rear and advancing over the hills made a surprise attack upon their position at dawn yesterday. The official report concludes as follows:

"The enemy's force was annihilated. Over 100 prisoners were taken, among them a Turkish major. Over 50 of their dead were found on the field and it is believed that none got away. Thirty camels were captured and the enemy's camp and their stores were destroyed. Our losses were one Gurkha killed and one wounded."

Ordered Legation Searched. General Carranza ordered that the Spanish legation be searched after Caro had denied the presence of De Caso, and when Caro refused permission for this search to be made, General Carranza ordered him to leave the country. Caro protested, but Carranza insisted that as a duly appointed minister his location enjoyed the right of extra-territoriality, at the same time he claimed the inviolability of his person.

The Mexican foreign minister, continuing, declared that Caro had no official standing in the country and that he had not presented his credentials. Furthermore, it was impossible for him to do this, inasmuch as he had been sent to a government which had not been recognized by his government, and there was no one to whom he might present the letters of recall of his predecessor, Senor Cologan. Carranza also, in his statement that Caro was lacking in respect because he objected to the searching of his house, and in that he failed to answer messages sent him by the Mexican authorities. Speaking in his statement on the subject of Caro, the Mexican foreign minister said that Carranza might in strict justice have insisted upon the search of the house, but he contented himself with the expulsion of Caro.

Villa Invites Caro to Join Him. EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 13.—General Villa today extended an invitation to Jose Caro, the Spanish minister to Mexico, who has been expelled from the country by action of General Carranza, to join him. The northern chieftain ordered his agent at Washington, Enrique C. Lorente, to make formal request that Caro himself or his agent accompany Villa, who has assumed the provisional presidency of the republic. It was predicted by local agents that Villa soon would issue a statement regarding the affair which led to the Spanish diplomat's election by the Carranza officials. Agent of Caro, whose alleged asylum afforded by Caro.

FOOD-SITUATION AT TAMPICO IS SERIOUS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A report to the state department today from Tampico says the food situation there is serious. The local government has imported corn from Vera Cruz and sold it to the people at a nominal price. About 200 Americans left Tampico recently for the United States. A number of destitute families in the interior also are to be sent north.

IOWA IN GRASP OF PLUMBERS TRUST

"One of Best Organized States in Union," According to Official of Combline

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 13.—(Special.) Officials of the National Association of Master Plumbers of America testified today for the government in the trial in the United States court of the 36 master plumbers under indictment charged with violation of the Sherman antitrust law. They saw Fred Werentz, Jr., of Davenport, former national state vice president of the association, and W. A. Bruce, a former organizer of the Iowa association.

Werentz testified that upon one occasion his company sold a bill of goods to a nonmember at Oelwein and as a result of complaints that he had made by William Scott of Oelwein, a defendant in the present case, was forced to pay a so-called "fine" which was about the same amount as was the bill of goods sold to the independent.

Claude R. Porter, United States district attorney, read from letters alleged to have been written by the late E. O. Edson, former organizing secretary of the Iowa association, and which told of the system employed by the Iowa organization in handling "complaints" and "information" slips.

In one of these letters, said to have been written by Edson to Theodore A. Barker, then secretary of the Montana association, the Iowa official said that "Iowa believes they have the best system in operation in the national association and today is the best organized state."

In sending out "information" slips, the association, according to the government lawyers, started a boycott of the jobbers or manufacturers against whom a complaint had been lodged.

U. S. SOLDIER TRIED FOR SKETCHING CANAL LOCKS

PANAMA, Feb. 13.—Private Charles H. Hill of the Tenth Infantry, U. S. A., who has been doing lock guard duty at Miraflores, was tried today by a court-martial on the charge of having made sketches of the locks, taken notes and drawn a few unimportant maps. The sketches, notes and maps were meager. He had a letter addressed to the Japanese charge at Panama, but Japan is not represented on the isthmus. The decision of the court has not been announced. Hill says he was using this means for getting out of the service.

Pikes Peak Likely to Be Used in Special Advertising Designs

A picture of Pikes Peak probably will be adopted as the Colorado design for a poster stamp, which will be used by all the cities throughout the state as means of inducing tourists to come to Colorado. Local artists are invited to submit sketches for consideration. No prize has been offered by the committee, but a reasonable price will be paid for the design.

The matter of a poster stamp campaign, which was suggested here at a meeting of the all-Colorado committee several weeks ago, was referred to a special committee consisting of P. A. Gray, secretary of the Pueblo Chamber of Commerce, Thordendy Deland, secretary of the Denver chamber of commerce, and Secretary A. W. Henderson of the local chamber. Henderson says the committee will be glad to receive sketches for consideration. It is hoped to have a three or four-color stamp in poster style, showing something of the beauties of Colorado scenery. It was suggested by members of the all-Colorado committee that Pikes Peak, the most famous mountain in the range, be used. All designs must be handed in to Secretary Henderson within the next few days.

Tynan to Illustrate Life at the State Prison

Lecture Tomorrow Night of Real Interest

Warden Thomas J. Tynan of the penitentiary at Canon City will give a lecture on his work at Perkins hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Men's club of St. Stephen's church. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern pictures and lantern slides and will be free and everyone, both men and women, is invited to attend. Tynan, who in prison reform has made a name of national prominence, some of the things he has accomplished are set forth in the following extracts from a recent article in the New York Sun:

When Tom Tynan was appointed warden on March 20, 1909, he found 500 convicts, 17 of whom were insane. He found guards who swore at the convicts, spies who peeped at night into their cells, whips for flogging them, convicts sleeping two in a cell, unsanitary cell-houses, an old hospital building with plenty of typhoid cases, the dungeon crowded, the usual number of short time trustees, and the hovering stretch of a penitentiary graft investigation.

Tynan at once abolished spies, stool pigeons and guards within the grounds. Yet not a single convict escaped in his first two years as warden.

No More Zebra Suits. He forbade overseers to swear at the convicts on any provocation whatever. He relegated the zebra suits to the incorrigibles. "Every new-comer I shall clothe in blue," he said, "unless he proves himself deserving of stripes." He instituted audiences one Sunday morning each month, at which any convict is allowed to write his name on a slip, file into the warden's office.

ENOS MILLS TO SPEAK

NIGHT OF FEBRUARY 22

Noted Coloradan to Give Address at Annual Dinner of Chamber of Commerce

Enos A. Mills of Estes Park, natural student and author, will deliver the address at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce on Washington's birthday, Monday, February 22. Mr. Mills will tell something of his experiences in the Rocky mountains and also touch upon the subject of national mountain parks—how Estes Park was secured—and possibly speak of the proposed Pikes Peak national park.

Mr. Mills addressed the Winter Night club last winter, at which time he spoke of the advisability of a national park for Colorado. His experiences have been many and varied and his address should prove decidedly interesting.

PUBLIC WARNED TO WATCH FOR FAKE MONEY ORDERS

Clever Forger Operating in West Hall Package of Blank Forms Stolen From Postoffice

Colorado Springs people are warned to be careful in cashing money orders for strangers. Money order forms Nos. 8326 to 8340 have been stolen from Springfield, Ill., and last month five of the orders were cashed in Omaha by a man giving his name as Joe J. Brown. He since has been identified as William Weber, a notorious money order thief and forger. His description follows: Age, about 40; height, 5 feet, 9 1/2 inches; weight, 215 pounds; eyes, hazel; hair, light; smooth face; big pigeon-toed feet; wears velvet hat; dark suit, and gray overcoat.

His methods are to register at a hotel, make several acquaintances, mention the fact that he is expecting a remittance. A letter is brought to him at the proper moment, he opens it, finds a money order and asks his acquaintance to cash it.

B. S. Bryant, Former Railroad Man Here, Undergoes Operation

B. S. Bryant, for some years chief engineer and general superintendent of the Colorado Midland railroad with headquarters in Colorado Springs, is recovering from a serious operation which he underwent in Washington, D. C., about two months ago, according to word received here by friends. Bryant, when he left Colorado Springs, went to South America for a New York firm and for nine years investigated engineering projects there. He returned to this country about two months ago, the war having made it impossible for him to continue his work and soon afterward became seriously ill, the operation resulting.

P. B. STEWART TO GIVE ADDRESS FEBRUARY 17

Philip B. Stewart, speaker of the house, will address the alumni and faculty of Colorado college at dinner to be given at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening. His subject will be "Present State Problems." Tickets for the dinner may be arranged at A. by telephoning W. R. Willis, Main 1573, or Dr. Bortz, Main 114.

THOMAS J. TYNAN

see the warden alone and file out. His convicts soon learned that audacity were not intended for flogging and petty tale bearing, and knives were laid on the warden's desk by convicts who had been willing for revenge to give up every hope of freedom.

He opened the dungeons and among other automata he found Tom, an Irishman whose backbone had not been broken by every conceivable form of modern prison torment, from flogging and bed making with a negro to the dungeon itself.

Then he set this convict at work, and exclusive of road building, this is what they did in the years 1909 and 1910: Built, for $18,000, a modern $75,000 hospital building, measuring 138 by 45 feet, containing every hospital necessity from sun parlor to morgue, and designed by Francisco, No. 5315, life tenant, who had learned all his architecture at the penitentiary; laid 8,549 square feet of cement floor in the prison and 42,775 square feet of cement sidewalk outside; installed a complete duplicate electric lighting system throughout the penitentiary, so that darkness need permit no escape; installed a complete new heating system; laid 19,014 fire brick; built a railroad spur to the penitentiary quarry, enabling him to sell $13,000 worth of stone a year besides supplying his own needs; screened every prison door and window; planted vines around all of the stone buildings; drove a tunnel far into the Royal Gorge, obtaining the purest mountain water for Canon City and the penitentiary; dug and operated 20 acres of irrigation ditches; put half a carload of glass in the prison windows; worked four ranches outside the prison walls on a half crop rental arrangement, from which in 1910 the penitentiary sold 1,000 pigs and stored 50 barrels of sauerkraut, 100 barrels of vinegar, 50 barrels of apple butter, etc., and earned $12,000 besides.

Business School, Drug Cures. And at present his convicts are building a concrete stadium for their football and baseball teams. Besides these athletic facilities, they are provided with a winter night school, an orchestra, a business school, manual training classes and cures for the liquor and drug habits. "Whiskey brings 96 per cent of these men to the penitentiary," says Tynan.

Not only do these tasks command from the convicts the enthusiasm which comes from working for oneself, but they enabled Tynan in 1909 and 1910 to save $106,756 on permanent improvements at the penitentiary and to return unused to the state legislature on December 1, 1910, between $40,000 and $50,000 of the penitentiary appropriation—the first time such a feat was ever accomplished in Colorado.

At present Tynan is planning to remodel his cell buildings so that each cell will have an outside window. His prison for more than two years has been a single cell institution. He is also pulling wires to get the legislature to add 500 acres to the prison ranches which he now owns.

"I guarantee that 90 per cent of the men employed on it (the proposed 200 acres) will never return to crime," he says. "Under the instruction of employed experts they would learn soil culture, crop care and all the details of scientific agriculture. Farming will keep them out and away from the temptations of the town. The cooperative plan must be employed in some degree, so that the convicts will not enter freedom with empty hands."

Yet there is no soft sentimentality about either Tom Tynan or his Colorado convicts. Tynan knows that practically all of his men are of low intelligence; that some of them are professional criminals, who take their imprisonment as a merchant takes a period of business depression; that very few of them have stolen creeds of bread to ward off starvation.

Tynan knows, furthermore, that most of them are sent to him because some "broke" in their lives they have made "one bad break" (his own phrase) and have been caught at it. He knows that practically all of them have that primitive code of morals which makes them lose a friend and hate a foe.

There are now over 200 ex-convicts who have gone out from the Colorado penitentiary during Tynan's regime who continue to write personal letters to him and to whom Tynan replies on unmarked envelopes and stationery.

SOCIABILITY TOUR PARTY WILL LEAVE SPRINGS APRIL 10

Trip This Year Will Take in Eastern Territory With Indianapolis Goal

Chamber of Commerce and business men's clubs about the route of the proposed Colorado Springs to Indianapolis sociability run are taking up the matter with a great deal of enthusiasm. Already word has been received from the Terre Haute chamber of commerce, the Springfield and Hannibal highway association, the Springfield commercial association, the Hannibal and St. Joseph (Missouri) highway association, the Pikes Peak (Colorado) highway association and the National Old Trails association.

Good Roads Predicted. The majority of the clubs are heartily in favor of the plan and have stated their intention of doing everything possible to help boost the trip. The members of the run will be maintained en route and an effort will be made to give them a royal reception at each stop. According to information received here the route will be in good condition in the early part of April, provided the spring is not unusually wet, while hotel accommodations are ample en route. It is also assured that automobiles from the different towns will join the tour for at least a day.

According to present plans the run will leave Colorado Springs, with representative cars from Manitou and Pueblo, about April 10. It will go east over the Colorado division of the Pikes Peak highway, having for its objective point Indianapolis, Ind., and probably several points farther east.

Weather Better in April. The weather during the early part of April will probably be more propitious than in May, according to weather bureau reports. The secretary of the Pikes Peak association in St. Joseph, Mo., has written Secretary Henderson of the Chamber of Commerce, enclosing a copy of the weather records for last April and May along the route of the proposed run. According to the records May is about 10 degrees warmer than April, but there is more rainfall in May. The records follow:

April, mean temperature, Colorado Springs, 45; St. Joseph, Mo., 53; Hannibal, Mo., 54; and Indianapolis, Ind., 52. May, mean temperature, Colorado Springs, 54; St. Joseph, Mo., 63; Hannibal, Mo., 64; and Indianapolis, Ind., 65. April, number of days with a measurable amount of rain, Colorado Springs, 6; St. Joseph, Mo., 10; Hannibal, Mo., 11; and Indianapolis, Ind., 13. May, number of days with measurable amount of rain, Colorado Springs, 9; St. Joseph, Mo., 11; Hannibal, Mo., 13; and Indianapolis, Ind., 13.

ALL-COLORADO COLLEGE PICNIC ON FEBRUARY 22

Students and Faculty Will Gather in Garden of the Gods to Celebrate Holiday

The seventh all-Colorado college picnic will be held in the Garden of the Gods Monday, February 22. Several special committees have been appointed by the student body to make arrangements for the big outing, the largest of the all-college affairs.

There will be the usual cafeteria lunch and the program following. It is probable that another motorcycle race will be held, while the usual sporting events will be included in the program.

Arrangements are being made for a "dinner" bus to run from the campus to the Garden. Usually the greater part of the students walk across the mesa.

GROVER AND ANDERSON CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE

Former Would Be Health Commissioner, Latter Chief of Public Works and Property

Two more candidates jumped into the spring election arena yesterday—Dr. B. B. Grover, 1618 North Nevada avenue, who seeks the office of commissioner of public health and sanitation, and W. A. Anderson, 161 North Tejon street, who will run for the office of commissioner of public works and property. Only one other candidacy has been announced—that of Perry Kots, to succeed himself as health commissioner.

All three candidates are preparing to circulate their petitions of nomination and expect to have them ready to file on Sunday, the charter permits. In announcing his candidacy, Dr. Grover issued the following statement to voters: "The health and physical well-being of a community depends in a very great degree upon the efficiency of the health department is obvious to all, yet it will doubtless surprise many to know that the United States government attaches such importance to this department of city life that it singles out among municipal officers the head of the health department as one who, from the importance of his office, requires special qualifications. Briefly, he should understand vital statistics thoroughly; he should know all there is known about the transmission of communicable diseases and understand how to prevent their spread; he should be familiar with the production and handling of milk, so as to insure a safe supply; he should understand foods and their adulteration; he should be sufficiently familiar with the laboratory methods of testing and appreciate the results of tests; he should have a working knowledge of water supply and purification, sewerage disposal, ice supply, and he should understand school hygiene, etc. All these and innumerable kindred questions are constantly coming to the health department for solution, and if the commissioner of public health and sanitation does not possess the technical knowledge, they must be delegated to high-salaried assistants for solution. For the last 20 years I have made a study of hygiene and sanitation, five years of which was devoted to the organization and administration of the health department of this city, during which time I initiated and had enacted into law by the city council a plan to bring all the sanitary laws now in force."

Confident that this training qualifies him to understand fully the scope, as well as the working details of the entire department, I have no hesitancy in soliciting the support of all who believe that competency should be one of the qualifications of a public officer.

As I am under obligations to no person, parties or interests I shall have that perfect liberty of action which is essential to the full performance of the duty of a public official, and, if elected, I pledge myself to be in reality a servant of the public.

Mr. Anderson issued no statement, saying he would permit that to go by for a few days. He has maintained a home in Colorado Springs since 1873, spending much of his time out of the city, however, because of business demands.

How Mrs. Harrod Got Bid of Her Stomach Trouble.

"I suffered with stomach trouble for years and tried everything I heard of, but the only relief I got was temporary and last spring I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and procured a bottle of them at our drug store. I got immediate relief from that dreadful heaviness after eating and from pain in the stomach," writes Mrs. Linda Harrod, Fort Wayne, Ind. Chamberlain's Tablets.

AUSTRIA NOW WANTS PEACE, BUT IS HELD TO BARGAIN BY THE KAISER

ROUMANIA THORN IN SIDE OF HUNGARY, WITH DEMAND FOR NEUTRALITY MONEY; COUNTRY IN HORRIBLE PLIGHT FROM THE STRUGGLE

LONDON, Feb. 13.—An American who has just returned from Austria-Hungary says it is only necessary for one to stay there a few days to see plainly that the inhabitants are thoroughly sick and tired of the war—men, women and children, high and low, rich and poor. This observer gave an interview on condition that he remain anonymous.

The Austrians look back to those first days in August when, with an "unpleasant" amounting to positive frenzy, they declared war on little Rumania. Hands banging through the streets, arches on the sidewalks wildly flapping, men yelling, boys throwing hats in the air as they look back over their shoulders, they find in the "gray dawn of reality much solid food for thought."

To add to the difficulty—one which Austria never really thought seriously of—there is Rumania, who has not been at all kind of late. Last summer she served notice on her western neighbor that the price of peace was $10,000,000. Austria protested wildly, but finally gave $40,000,000 on account, which, however, did not make much difference, because it was borrowed from the Emperor William. But now, that is to say, during the last 10 days Rumania has been pressing her claim for the remaining $20,000,000 in a manner most distressing to Hungary. In short, Rumania is thinking very seriously of taking Transylvania, 7,000,000 of natural gas, silver, coal and petrol have largely been developed there, which may possibly have something to do with the idea, but that, of course, is a detail. Rumania nevertheless has become very annoying.

Can't Stop War Machinery.

"But the perplexing feature of the whole matter from the standpoint here, seems to be that the piece of machinery that they were so easily able to set in motion last August will not stop running now—it keeps wildly running on."

"Every Austrian officer I have talked to has been loud and outspoken in the cause of peace. One cavalry captain, whom I met on the train leaving Vienna, frankly admitted he had seen St. Moritz, where his wife had a villa, and where he expected to spend the winter. His place had been filled by a German officer, as was the case with many others."

"As to the Austrian as a soldier, it can be said that, leaving out his officers, he starts even with the best European armies. His equipment is good, he wears a warm gray uniform similar to the German, only without the headgear, steel boots and short breeches. He carries on his back a gas mask, and has a rifle as good as the bayonet, although not as good as the British, as in my opinion, far better than the French. The Russian bayonet on the other hand, is much longer and bluer. The Austrian soldier will obey orders."

Prince Albert of Monaco

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Prince Albert of Monaco, who became very popular when he visited America recently, is first on the list of candidates drawn up by the committee of the Academy of Medicine for the honor of foreign associate. The prince is a scientist of no mean ability. Besides his knowledge of the art of healing, he has made valuable contributions to wireless telegraphy and has discovered many new things about the bottom of the ocean.

Other names on the list include Dr. Simon Flexner of New York, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research; Dr. Kitasato of Tokyo; Dr. Perron of Paris and Sir Almroth Wright of London, author of antityphoid inoculation.

sible. Austria, France and Germany side by side for the culture and peace of Europe. Serbia, Russia and especially England, shall perish with the unrighteous.

"The Austrians are, I think, taken as a whole, the most tedious people in the world. High and low, rich and poor, they will believe anything they hear."

There is a fine story, the truth of which you may be very careful not to doubt in these parts concerning a Prussian general of the high command, who for the last 10 or 15 years has busied himself making a vast minefield for the silly Russians to walk over. When about three army corps were in it, the general in person pressed the button, and the enemy went sky-high in every direction. The story has a sad touch to it, however, in the fact that the sight was of such a shocking and revolting nature that the general lost his reason then and there, and is at present a raving maniac.

Regret Loss of Life.

"Then all Austria's general had a heart attack, and no one knew about it, and into which he enticed countless thousands of Russians, where they perished miserably. Their cries, as they sank slowly beneath the soft mud, could be heard for many miles. Some who repeated the story to me, regretted the idea that it was almost too late to stop it, and that at least great a loss of life, and that at least the poor wretches should have been put out of their misery more quickly."

A flock of some standing in the thick fog, and a few scattered in the mist, that the news had been that the general had died, and that he had been buried in the ground. The general had been buried in the ground, and the news had been that the general had died, and that he had been buried in the ground.

At a little railroad station some miles south of Cracow I saw three badly wounded Russians who had been dumped there. One of them had been dumped there, and the other two had been dumped there.

At that moment a hail of shells was raining upon us. Then the cannon ceased, and a couple of hundred German soldiers, evidently convinced that we were not a bad force, came out. The adjutant's son-in-law received a bullet in the head, and the adjutant himself was killed. Three killed and six wounded on the field. Three

There are Men who Oppose Peruna

Peruna Restored me from a Breakdown

Mr. C. E. Conbs, St. Joseph, Mich., writes: "Too close confinement never agrees with me. I have found that a lack of proper amount of exercise and rest, combined with long hours and constant application to work, breaks down the health. Carelessness in the matter of preserving the health I found would eventually result in a complete breakdown."

Palpitation of the Heart.
"I was troubled at one time with headache, palpitation of the heart, and loss of appetite and sleep soon told me it was time to do something."

Cataract of the Head.
"Mr. Peter Schaefer, 2608 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes: 'I am a perfectly well and strong man today, thanks to Peruna. I suffered for five years with an unpleasant cataract of the head, aggravated by I caught the least cold. No snuff or inhalers helped any, but five bottles of Peruna cured me and I give you unstinted praise for your medicine. It deserves it.'" of them had even been bayoneted by their fellows.

"As soon as day broke we set to work to extricate a few of our wounded who were three-quarters buried, and later on the engineers arrived to help us reorganize our defense. I lost about 50 men in all by the explosion—40 killed and 10 wounded.

The spot only five minutes before. As it was I should have been buried if it had not been for the solidity of the blocks of wood forming the roof. My unholy creek, who was sleeping in another shelter five feet away was crushed to death and so were the others close by. It took us an hour and a half to dig them out.

The explosion was simply terrific, and opened a yawning crater 120 feet in diameter and nearly 50 feet in depth. One could have no conception of the force of the explosion if one did not see the havoc wrought by it. The experts told us that the quantity of powder used could not have been less than seven to eight tons."

HAVOC WROUGHT BY MINE UNDER TRENCH

French Position, but Are Forced to Fall Back

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Captain Maurice Jean, the commander of a company whose trench was blown up by the Germans at Alger farm, about five miles southeast of Ypres, gives in a letter to his parents an account of what such an occasion really means.

"It was about 4:30 in the morning," he writes, "and the moon was still shining. Suddenly a sharp fusillade was opened by the German line. Our men replied surprised at such an incident on a cold, clear night. I rushed out, and with the assistance of my men, succeeded in stopping the fire along our line. Then I returned to my little shelter to write a report to my staff. Hardly had I begun when I felt beneath me what seemed to be nothing less than an earthquake. I was hurled from my seat and covered with dirt. The smoke went out. Half paralyzed, I managed to force a way out of my shelter, though the exit was almost completely blocked."

I gazed at the fact that my trench had been blown up and blowing up the trench. All around me was a scene of death and I felt certain that my men had been buried alive. I rushed back to my men, and found them all dead. I was the only one left. I was the only one left."

At that moment a hail of shells was raining upon us. Then the cannon ceased, and a couple of hundred German soldiers, evidently convinced that we were not a bad force, came out. The adjutant's son-in-law received a bullet in the head, and the adjutant himself was killed. Three killed and six wounded on the field. Three

Mr. Charles E. George, 825 Perido St., New Orleans, La., writes: "I think Peruna the best tonic ever put on sale. Having for years been afflicted with catarrh of the head and taken medicine prescribed by different physicians without avail, I finally was induced to try Peruna. It effected a cure. That is the strongest testimonial I can give as to its use."

Why People Oppose Peruna.
Some good men may oppose Peruna. This may be true. Men may differ on any important subject, why not as to the value of Peruna?

But it is safe to say that the men who oppose Peruna are the men who know least about it. Who can find a man who has honestly used Peruna for some ailment and because of his disappointment is opposing Peruna? There is, probably no such man. The men who oppose Peruna are doing it on purely theoretical grounds. The men who have used Peruna believe in it and recommend it to their neighbors.

Credible Testimony.
These men would not say such things if they were not sure. Their statements are absolutely unselfish. No plausible gain can come to them except the consciousness that they are helping others. Years have passed since these cures were made. They still stand by what they have said. One can get by such evidence. Peruna is all they say it is, a tonic that fortifies the system against colds, coughs, catarrh and all the many exhausting influences of modern business.

Germans Force Belgians to Get on Water Wagon

ROULOGNE, Feb. 13.—From a man who arrived here yesterday from Brussels were obtained details as to recent happenings there.

When the Germans entered Brussels they gave orders forbidding bar and restaurant holders to serve intoxicating drinks to the Belgians, and employed a number of plain clothes German police men to see that the order was carried out. One of the men went into the Grand cafe and asked for a whisky and soda. It was served and the man drank it. Then, turning to the manager, he said: "That will be 200 marks. Notably did you neglect to ask my nationality upon entering, but you served me with an intoxicating drink." The German thus profited by 100 marks in addition to a drink.

BACK FROM THE FIRING LINE

First Aid to the Wounded

Paris, Feb. 13.—At almost every station on the railroads, a large number of men, shattered and wrecked for men, must face the future, and yet they accept their fate without a murmur of complaint or bitterness. It is the same in England, in France and, I suppose, in Russia, that all soldiers are bearing their sufferings with the greatest of fortitude.

The best aid these men have is within themselves. The human body will bear resist infection from bullets when it is healthy, strong, active and with all of its functions fully alive and working. The best aid to this condition is a vegetable tonic and alterative that will first put the stomach and blood right, for these are dependent on one another. Good stomach means good blood, and good blood means good stomach.

Dr. F. J. Allen's Golden Medical Discovery builds the stomach to do its work naturally and it properly stimulates the liver. The system is purified from poisons. The blood is purified. Every organ is rejuvenated. This is the best tonic and alterative. It is the best tonic and alterative. It is the best tonic and alterative.

I find the Tonic Peruna invaluable

Mr. George Wintzinger, 1310 Bailey Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Peruna is all right. I know it for I have tried it now for three years, and as long as I can get Peruna I shall need no doctors or medicine."

A Busy Lawyer.
"This extra work, in addition to the general supervision of my law practice, is very exhausting to the system. The tonic which I find of invaluable service at such times, is Peruna."

We prize such testimonials very highly, coming as they do from men of brains and push, who could not possibly have any motive for exaggeration or deception. His full name and address is Mr. Elmer E. Rogers, Atty., No. 127 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois.

An Athlete's Testimonial.
"Three winters ago, after a severe contest, I became overheated, and somehow caught cold, which developed into a catarrhal condition of the head. Fortunately for me my attention was called to Peruna, and that within a week I was all right once more."

"Since then if I ever feel at all dull or worn out a few doses will set me up and make me feel all right, and I feel that it is a fine strengthening tonic."

Count Witte

PHOTOGRAPH Jan. 20. (By mail to New York.) There is a considerable amount of talk growing up in Russia, headed by Count Witte, as to whether the Russian should mention this movement to the world, but its strength is undeniable.

A rumor is being carried on open in Moscow, London and this city to break the industrial alliance of the czar and King George. Count Witte, carried on the Russian side of the Russian-Great Britain alliance, which was made in 1907, is said to be pushing Russia into war for her own selfish ends. He is said to be the head of it, while carefully preserving her own resources as to be able to seize the lion's share of the booty, and the rest is to be divided.

Whooping Cough

"When my daughter had whooping cough she coughed so hard at one time that she had hemorrhage of the lungs. I was terribly alarmed about her condition. Seeing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy so highly recommended, I got her a bottle and it relieved the cough at once. Before she had finished two bottles of this remedy she was entirely well," writes Mrs. S. F. Grimes, Crooksville, Ohio. Obtainable everywhere.

GERMAN ACCOUNT OF WAR OPTIMISTIC

BERLIN, Feb. 13, (by wireless to London).—The official statement issued by the German army headquarters says:

In the western theater of war, enemy aviators again dropped bombs on the coast as they also did yesterday (Thursday). The bombs caused regrettable damage to the civil population, while from the military point of view we suffered only slight losses.

On the extreme western front, artillery ammunition was found which doubtless originated in American factories.

The number of prisoners taken during the attacks which were repulsed yesterday in the west of Sedan was increased today by four officers and 478 men. Before our front line of the enemy's men were found killed while our losses in these engagements in killed and injured amounted to 99 men.

North of Massiges to the north-west of St. Menchould another 1200 meters of the French positions were taken in continuation of our attacks of February 12.

The enemy attempted to make an attack on the "Siegfried" in the valleys, but was everywhere repulsed without difficulty.

In the eastern theater of the war, on both sides of the East Prussian frontier our operations are everywhere progressing successfully. Wherever the enemy attempts to resist our position is quickly broken.

In Poland, on the right bank of the Vistula, our attacking troops crossed the lower Skawa and are proceeding in the direction of Raciborz.

On the left bank of the Vistula there is nothing of importance to report.

21 DANGEROUS ROCKS DISCOVERED IN INSIDE PASSAGE TO ALASKA

Valuable Work Done by Coast
Survey, Which Reduces
Danger to Ships

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The startling information that 21 dangerous rocks in 42 miles of ship channel had been discovered in Alaska during last season by Field Engineer John A. Daniels of the coast and geodetic survey has been made public by Secretary of Commerce Dredfield.

These rocks were located by means of a wire drag more than a mile long the wire being supported at the desired depths by cables to surface buoys and towed along by power boats.

The ship channels were surveyed by the wire drag system in a narrow channel in eastern Alaska. These form a section of the well known inside passage followed by all steamers coming up and down the coast. The main thoroughfare included in the survey operations were the Alaskan channels. No more than 100 fathoms deep, the channels of this part of Alaska are nearly straight up and down, then above and below the level of the water. Depths from 20 to 100 fathoms are within 100 yards of shore. Let it was in these waters the 21 dangerous rocks were discovered.

Pyramid Rocks Located.

One of these rocks is of pyramid shape and rises over 500 feet from the bottom of the channel to within 17 feet of the surface. It is surrounded by deep water on all sides and is now laid on the chart where a 100 fathom sounding was formerly recorded. Field Engineer Daniels speaks of this 600-foot pyramid as a sort of a submerged Washington monument. He says that if the lead struck it in his old survey it probably slipped off into the deep water of 100 fathoms along side. But he thinks it is more probable that it came in between two soundings and was missed altogether.

The net result of the survey operations is covered by the statement that 42 miles of ship channel between 27 dangerous rocks hitherto unknown and uncharted are now completely surveyed and made safe for navigation. A large result from comparatively small operations. The entire field season of the wire-drag survey was included within three months. Out of these the number of working days was 48. The area covered by the wire drag was 50 square miles. The cost for each danger discovered was $675. The cost of the work of the State of Alaska was $1,100,000. The cost of the work of the State of Alaska was $1,100,000. The cost of the work of the State of Alaska was $1,100,000.

RICH AMERICAN WOMAN DOING A GREAT WORK IN FRANCE

From the Woman's Home Campaign. Shortly after the war began, an American resident in Paris established in a government building in the suburb of Neuilly the American Ambulance, now familiarly known as the American Ambulance hospital as "ambulance" in French means a military hospital.

French means a military hospital, which holds the record of efficient service. The hospital building was remodeled by Capt. H. Greenough, an American aviator.

The head of the hospital, Dr. Winchester, Dr. H. Greenough, and a number of medical, surgical and nursing staff are Americans. Even the janitor and the chauffeurs who run the donated American motor ambulances are American.

The work of the hospital has been greatly furthered by the generosity of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, formerly Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt, who has undertaken to provide all funds needed to maintain the operating field hospitals on the shifting battle front and who has gone to France to familiarize herself with the urgent needs of the service.

Her first contribution of supplies included 10,000 blankets and 10 automobiles manned by volunteer drivers.

"JOHNSON'S JOY RIDE"

IT SEEMS that our friend the Commissioner of Public Safety objects to the term "joy rider" as applied to himself. He fills a half-column of newspaper space telling the public of his sacred right to take pleasure rides to Denver in the City's car, break the car and turn the repair bill over to the Council, and incur a running expense four times greater than his railroad fare would have been. He pretends that it was a "business trip," and winds up with a suggestion that if the public doesn't like it they can recall him.

All of which sounds very smart, but let us see just what happened. Johnson wanted to go to Denver last Sunday. It was a fine, bright day, an ideal day for motoring, and it appears that Mr. Johnson has acquired quite a taste for motoring since he attained to the dignity of a commissioner and the privilege of having the dear people pay for the gas every time he takes the big Stutz out on the speedway. So he invited a friend to go out with him for a little motoring on the Denver road. They went.

Of course there was a reason for this trip, just as there is a reason for grapefruit. It was a "business" trip. City business. While in Denver on that beautiful Sunday morning Johnson would drop around and ask the price of a couple of tires for a fire truck. The reader will observe that it was what might be called an alibi; a reason for the trip, which would come in handy when he put in his repair bill to the Council.

We understand that the average cost of operating a big, heavy car such as the one in which our worthy Commissioner takes the air, is about 15 cents a mile. On this basis it cost the people of Colorado Springs $22.50 for the gas, grease, deterioration and other concomitants whereby Joy-ride Johnson and Friend Brimmer were floated to Denver and back. Johnson could have bought a round-trip ticket for $4.05 on the railroad. For 40 cents more he could have enjoyed the novel luxury of riding in a Pullman.

But that's all right; we want our public officials to travel in a state befitting their dignity and importance, so give him the Pullman both ways. So traveling by rail he could have made his "business trip" to Denver at a saving to the City of $17.55 below the cost of operating his devil-wagon. He could have taken Friend Brimmer along, and charged his expenses also to the City, and still saved $12.00 to the taxpayers.

This makes no allowance for the inevitable accident with which even an experienced motorist like our Commissioner is liable to meet. We do not know the amount of the bill; he speaks of it as reported to be "several hundred dollars damages." But he figures that he has nevertheless saved the City $20. A mathematical wizard, that man!

The subject is interesting, but we haven't space in which to advert to its many other phases. For instance, what business has even such an exalted personage as the Commissioner of Public Safety using for the entire day an expensive car bought expressly for the use of the Fire Chief, and which might be needed by that official at any moment? The thing is not to be justified even on the flimsy pretext that he was transacting "business."

CHILDREN'S SAVINGS

A CANVASS of the banks in Los Angeles shows that 40,000 children under sixteen years of age have almost $1,000,000 in savings deposits, an average of $25 each. The largest account is that of a twelve-year-old boy, who began seven years ago with a deposit of 50 cents and now has $1,522. One bank has 4,500 depositors between the ages of two and fourteen years.

Los Angeles is not averse to boasting, in season and out, that in this case it has something to be truly proud of. One of its bankers declares that on this showing Los Angeles children are the thriftiest in the world, but before accepting his statement it might be well to examine statistics relating to the savings of the Germans,

French and (before the war) the Belgians. The people of those countries are famous for their frugality and thrift, and it is well known that the wonderful financial stability of France is based chiefly on the unfailing regularity with which the French peasant deposits a part of his earnings however small they may be in a savings bank and later invests them in a bond. We do not know whether this trait is found in the same degree among French children, but as it seems to be inherent in the whole people it is safe to assume that it begins in childhood.

And what a splendid trait it is! One need spend only a few minutes calculating the ultimate effects of such widespread small savings by children as are reported from Los Angeles to realize what a revolution would be brought about in our economic and business life if the whole people practised this habit.

But the sad truth is that most Americans do not save money; indeed, relatively few actually save anything at all. Many of them make a pretense at it and save for a time, but only to "blow" their accumulation on some luxury, or some unwise speculation, before it reaches a substantial figure. Others refuse to start a savings account because of a mistaken belief that they will not be able to continue it, or that in any event their savings will be too small to make a real nest egg.

But the fact is that the habit of small savings is no harder to acquire than any other habit, provided one sets about forming it in a common sense way. The man, or the child, who attempts to save too large a percentage of his income is certain to wind up by dropping the account. For instance, it is hardly to be supposed that a married man with a salary of $100 a month could regularly deposit $15 or $20 a month in a savings bank. He might do it for a while; if he were extremely thrifty and his living expenses lower than those of most people, he might keep it up permanently, but the chances are he would fail and this failure would probably inspire disgust with the venture. But if he started on a smaller scale there would be a good chance of permanency, and the results in the long run would be better worth while.

It is safe to say that the parents of at least one-half of the children born could, if they would, start small savings accounts for the youngsters and maintain them throughout their childhood. Of course there are exceptions, including the countless thousands of parents who earn scarcely enough to maintain their families. But in the average case even a workingman who rates himself as decidedly poor, can, if he is willing to make the effort, drop a quarter or a half-dollar in the baby's little iron bank on every payday. And then, if he has the nerve to refrain from "borrowing" these accumulations; if, instead, he deposits them in a savings bank, the money will take care of itself. In a year, or in two or three years, the nest egg will amount to $100, and the banker will cheerfully advise him how to invest it in a bond or other safe security.

By this means it is entirely practicable to accumulate a fund for a child which, by the time he is well grown, will amount to several hundred, or perhaps two or three thousand dollars, and in which the child himself has probably already developed enough interest to augment with his own small savings. Imagine the ultimate effect on the individual prosperity of the American people if even one-fourth or one-half of those who attain their majority annually could start life with a little cash capital acquired in this way!

OPEN PARLIAMENT

THE FLAG

To the Editor of The Gazette:
 Far from apologizing for the Lusitania incident, the British admiralty has suggested the use of neutral flags by all English vessels navigating the dangerous zone.

It may be that there is no legal precedent to prohibit the misuse of our flag, but that is immaterial. If England arrogates to herself the right to promulgate a new code of international law suited to her present embarrassment we certainly are justified in insisting that our flag, the symbol of our national honor, be not degraded by being made the shield of cowardice and deception.

If we permit this outrage—or content ourselves with a weakly protest, to be answered by some evasive reply as in the case of the violation of the neutrality of our shipping, our prestige in world affairs will be a joke. Patriotism and political wisdom point out that the only sensible position that our administration could assume in this emergency is to insist that the flag be used only for its proper purpose.

WILL WILSON, Bryan, et al. take it.

FROM OTHER PERSPECTIVES

WE ARE AMERICANS

Some 40 gentlemen, including five members of congress—Messrs. Bartholdt, Volmer, Bartholdt, Lohack and Potter—drove to Washington to demand American neutrality, free from commercial, financial and political subservience to foreign powers, always excepting Germany. Meeting at Washington, the 30 have decided to examine statistics relating to the savings of the Germans,

French and (before the war) the Belgians. Now, all this reminds one of the resolutions introduced in congress by Senators Hitchcock of Nebraska, Works of California and others—resolutions intended to forbid these exports to England and her allies. Yet, if Germany controlled the seas, shipments of arms would be by Germanic logic, neither "unfair, unneutral," nor unethical. There are a good many genuine Americans who regret the fact that shipments of arms and munitions are consigned from our ports to the ports of England and France for use against Germany, Austria and Turkey; these persons would like to feel that no American individuals or corporations profit by the war.

But to find in the actual state of things a violation of neutrality is a horse of another color. There is ample precedent for these shipments; there is, in fact, no authority precedent. It is not America's fault if Germany cannot make use of American munitions; that is due to Germany's relative inferiority as a naval power, in spite of her dashing sea raids.

One may be grieved or cheered by the fact that there is no German port open for American contraband—but the sympathies of a neutral nation do not affect international law. The proposals of such statesmen as Messrs. Hitchcock and Bartholdt and Volmer have for their intent, compensating Germany for the naval superiority of the allies—and for us to compensate Germany in this or any other way would be an unwarranted and perilous piece of meddling. As Collier's said on January 9 (and a hundred newspapers have echoed the statement):

Neutrality consists in playing no favorites. To stop shipments to the allies would be favoritism. Now, we do not propose to violate our neutrality to please Germany.

What Mr. Bartholdt and his kind need to be reminded of is the fact that they are Americans, and must regard the present war as Americans or forfeit their right to be considered good citizens.

OUR POPULARITY

Present prospects are excellent that the end of the great war will find us the most disliked nation in the world. The Germans will hate us because our sympathies were not with them, and the allies will probably hate us because, approving their cause, we would not go in with them, but bothered them about neutrals' right and took big prices for what we sold them. Germany is mad now because we sell war material to the allies, and the allies are getting mad because we talk about buying German ships to trade in.

We are in the position of being defended at a vast cost from Teutonic aggression, and being peevish about the details of the immunity we enjoy. Not that we are to blame, but the natural fate of a neutral seems to be to be disliked. Belgium is gathering the proper fruits of neutrality. We shall probably escape the fruits, but harvest the sentiments that would accompany them. The position on the fence is not altogether delectable, aside from the risk, not quite negligible, of being knocked off.

Talks on Thrift

(American Bankers Association)
 THE GREAT VALUE OF SAVINGS BANKS

There is no surer evidence of the prosperity of a community than when its savings banks show healthy and growing deposits.—Burlington (Ia.) Hawkeye.

Following are half a dozen outstanding advantages of using a savings bank or the savings department of a commercial bank or trust company:
 1. Safety. Savings banks are the safest financial institutions in this country. Recent statistics showed the total liabilities of failed savings banks in proportion to the aggregate deposits of all such banks to be only about six ten-thousandths of 1 per cent (0.0006%). Deduction for the amount realized on the substantial assets of those few unfortunate institutions still further reduces the already infinitesimal loss to depositors.

2. Ability to deposit or withdraw any amount at any time. Some banks have a minimum for deposit, although it is usually a low one—5 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents or a dollar, as the case may be. In different states there is a different maximum for savings deposits, ranging from $1,000 to $5,000. Ordinarily money can be withdrawn without any notice whatever. In times of panic or possible panic, however, a 30 or 60-day notice may be required.

3. Regular Income. There are few if any other investments where it is possible to put in small, odd amounts at any time and have your money begin to earn interest promptly, as it does in a savings account. Savings bank interest is something you can depend upon.

4. Compound Interest. The investor in bonds or stocks must collect his interest or dividends, and if he does not use the money, must attend personally to investing it. Interest allowed by the banks at the end of a given period, if not withdrawn, is placed in the depositor's credit, and itself draws interest from that time on, thus automatically becoming a part of the deposit. That means a constant increase in the amount at interest, and in the interest payments.

5. Freedom from Tax. In most states savings bank deposits are free from taxation by state or local authorities.

6. The Habit of Saving. Last, but by no means least, of the advantages of a savings account is what might be called the reflex influence on the depositor himself. To firmly fix in him the valuable habit of saving, which will be a lifelong benefit to him.

T. D. MAC GREGOR.

SCRIPTURE

GENESIS 7:1-10

And the Lord said unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark, for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.
 Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female, and of beasts that are not clean by twos, the male and his female.
 Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female, to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth, forty days and nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the earth.

And Noah did according unto all that the Lord commanded him.
 And Noah was 600 years old—THE flood of waters was upon the earth.

And Noah went in, and his wife and his sons and his sons' wives with him, to the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every beast that creepeth upon the earth.

There went in two and two—Noah into the ark, the quail and the dove, I tell you.
 And it came to pass after seven days that the

A CHANT OF LOVE FOR ENGLAND

(This "Chant of Love" was, of course, suggested by "Ernest" L. Sawyer's "Chant of Hate," familiar through the spirited version of Mrs. Archibald Henderson—The Editors.)

A song of hate is a song of Hell;
 Some there be that sing it well.
 Let them sing it loud and long.
 We lift our hearts in a loftier song:
 We lift our hearts to Heaven above,
 Singing the glory of her we love—
 England!

Glory of thought and glory of deed,
 Glory of Hampden and Rushmore;
 Glory of ships that sought far goals,
 Glory of swords and glory of soul;
 Glory of songs mounting as birds,
 Glory of Milton, glory of Nelson;
 Glory of Milton, glory of Gordon and Scott;
 Glory of Shelley, glory of Sidney;
 Glory transcendent that perishes not—
 Here is the story, here be the glory,
 England!

Shatter her baseless breast, O May!
 The Spirit of England pour its avenging
 Tash the bomb on the dome of Paul;
 Do not ye the fame of the Admiral fall;
 Pry the stone from the chancel floor—
 Dream ye that Shakespeare shall live
 no more?

Where is the giant shot that kills
 Wordsworth walking the old green hills?
 Tremble, the red rose on the ground—
 Keats is Beauty while earth spins round!

Bind her, grind her, burn her with fire,
 Cast her ashes into the sea—
 She shall escape, she shall aspire,
 She shall arise to make men free;
 She shall arise in a sacred scorn,
 Lighting the lives that are yet unborn.

Spirit, eternal, Splendor eternal,
 England!
 —Helen Gray Cone, in the Atlantic.

THE EUROPEAN WAR

The following poem was written by the Rev. James Hamilton of Grand Rapids, Mich., whose son, Mr. H. A. Hamilton, is a resident of this city.

Lord God of Hosts, what means this strife
 Which chills the hearts of men,
 And makes the nations fratricides,
 And earth a slaughter pen?

Is this the best that statesmanship
 Baptized in Jesus' name,
 Can do to stem this lust for blood,
 Or quench this thirst for flame?

The savage beasts in jungles dark,
 With cruel fang and claw,
 Their victims rend for needed food,
 And this is Nature's law.

But men with devilish engines strive
 How they may maim and slay,
 And make this earth as near like hell
 As hate and malice may.

All this in name of God and home,
 Or dear old Motherland,
 Is this the maxim Jesus gave,
 Whose right is to command?

How soon this earth with primal curse
 Will be as desolate as the loam,
 If men would heed our Lord's command
 And share each other's woes.

Then Frank and Slav and Teuton
 And Serb and Briton true,
 Would end their strife in fond embrace
 And earth be made anew.

—Rev. James Hamilton, D. D.

WHAT THEY LIKE

"We all like sheep," the tenors shrill
 Begin, and then the church is still.
 While back and forth across the aisle
 Is seen to pass the "catching" smile.

"We all like sheep," the altos moan
 In low, rich, and mellow tone.
 While broader grows the merry grin,
 And nose gets further off from chin.

"We all like sheep," the sopranos sing
 Till all the echoes wake and ring.
 The young folks titter, and the rest
 Suppress the laugh in bursting chest.

"We all like sheep," the basses growl—
 The choir grows into a howl.
 And even the deacon's face is graced
 With wonder at the singers' taste.

"We all like sheep," runs the refrain,
 And then to make their meaning plain
 They all grope together say,
 "We all like sheep," says Columbus Bisset.

WHERE BAREFOOT

IS THE FASHION

W. R. Aughtinbaugh in Leslie's.
 Half of the population of Latin America have never had shoes on their feet. In the first place fully 50 per cent of the inhabitants of the countries under discussion are either Indians, negroes or mixed breeds, living the most squalid lives, being farm laborers, miners or pack-train attendants. Their earthly belongings are few, their pay very small, their homes primitive.

Many of them are so poor that during all their lives they never see money, and secure the things necessary for their existence by bartering and trading for them. Society seems in this part of the world to conclude that all men are divided into two classes: those wearing shoes and those who go barefooted, for I have seen this announcement on several Spanish-American toll bridges:

NOTICE
 Pedestrians wearing shoes, 5 cents.
 Pedestrians barefooted, 1 cent.

Do not jump at the conclusion that the remaining half of the people in these lands wear shoes, for in doing so you would also be mistaken. Quite a percentage of them do, but many wear a foot gear of native construction called "alpargatas," which are nothing more or less than a form of sandal, with a heavy sole of hard, tanned leather, adapted to be tied to the foot with either thong or a piece of tape, while others use what at first glance looks like a shoe, but really consists of a sole made of twisted or woven straw, secured to the upper made of cotton or canvas, arranged to be adjusted to the foot and held in place by means of laces.

Making the proper allowance for the wear of these two different types of foot coverings and taking into consideration those above referred to who go absolutely barefooted, one may be

5:28 TWILIGHT SLEEP CASES

In spite of all opposition, twilight sleep is having a fair trial. In one book on anesthetics there are references to 100 articles on this method. Some of these articles are by men who report the use of this method in several thousand cases. One reports its use in 3,000 cases, another in 2,000 cases. Many have employed it in more than 500 cases.

Dr. Berthels Van Hoesen reports that she has made use of it in 5,287 cases. She reported to the Budapest congress on medicine in 1908 that she had used it in 1,000 cases. In the five years since she has continued its use, being more enthusiastic about it now than ever before.

In a recent meeting of the Chicago Medical society she reported:
 "Our experience at the Mary Thompson hospital enables us to say positively that twilight sleep, as we administer it, does not make the baby asplastic in many percent of cases and prevents a high degree of lacerations, hemorrhages and convulsions in the mother. We do not use the Freudberg method and attribute our success to the minute doses of morphine and the large doses of scopolamin that are given, and to the special obstetrical outfit used and devised by us."

"We have had from twenty to thirty twilight deliveries every month since last June, and not one still birth, and all the mothers left the hospital well."

The larger part of these, more than 5,000 cases, are cases of anaesthesia for surgical work, and the number of cases of obstetric surgery is large. The method is essentially as follows:

The first dose consists of one-eighth of a grain of morphine and 1/100 of a grain of scopolamin. No more morphine is given. Enough scopolamin is given to keep the woman perfectly unconscious and also to neutralize the effect of the morphine. Scopolamin is given in 1-100 of a grain every half hour, or every hour until these doses are taken, unless the patient is profoundly under the influence of the smaller dose.

Just how the physicians at the Mary Thompson hospital go about caring for their patients is a matter that will interest physicians everywhere. They read about it in medical journals. The points of interest are that after having used the method in more than 5,000 cases, Dr. Van Hoesen and her associates advocate its use.

Latest Photograph of German Chief of Staff

This is the latest photograph of General von Falkenhayn the man on whom the burden of war rests more in Germany than any other except the Kaiser himself. He succeeded General von Moltke as chief of staff some weeks ago, and during most of that time he has been in the field. General von Falkenhayn was minister of war in July when the conflict broke out and the Kaiser was so well pleased with his work that he was promoted as soon as Von Moltke was displaced.

EDISON'S FIRST LAMP

Thirty-five Years Ago Thomas A. Edison Produced the Electric Lamp. How Edison Developed From Telegrapher to the World's Greatest Inventor

Thomas readily and hung together as a filament when the electric juice was turned onto it. Generally the filament of the lamp did not stay put but blew up before it could give Jack a moment's light.

But there were interludes of play and the chief of the first. One of the funniest episodes was when Edison made carbonized filaments out of the very best whiskers of one of his he was already half way up the spectrum and got a fine start with a dull red glow. But when the electric carbon filaments were made as to the available supply of the filament in the laboratory at Menlo Park, the progress was given up in despair.

At the time it first occurred to the inventor to use a filament of carbon, his mind was not on the lamp but on the telephone. He was then working on the word telephony and the word telephony was in the air. Not only Edison but the world was full of the word. Edison had thought of the telephone and had not yet built it. He had thought of the telephone and had not yet built it. He had thought of the telephone and had not yet built it.

Perfecting the Lamp.

Another advance was embodied in lamps still of the carbon type in which the filaments were strengthened by such substances as would justify calling them metalized. The more word was a revelation as to the direction in which the art was tending and very quickly real metallic filaments were on the market and available to the public. In particular the metal tantalum quite rare and scarce seemed to disengage itself from the rest of the group and was found useful in many ways but it was never more than a half-hearted competitor with the good old carbon lamp.

Yet all the immense amount of investigation in the field of rare metal filaments was bound to yield a result. If improvement actually lay along that line, the way out was soon found in tungsten, a metal tried as far back as the earlier days of Edison but not then available under the practical conditions of its production and use.

The introduction and general adoption of the tungsten lamp has been literally nothing short of a revolution in the art of interior illumination with a correspondingly tremendous effect on exterior lighting. Working down from a consumption of four or five watts of electrical energy per candlepower in Edison's carbon filament lamp to the standard of a few years ago of 20 watts per candlepower, the Mazda has brought that down in about five years to 1.5 watts. In the larger sizes of Mazda nitrogen filled lamps the reduction in current consumption has reached the low point of a half watt per candle.

Union labor is running high. Al has opened a free employment bureau for unemployed workers in affiliation with labor unions.

New began the years of Edison's greatest activity when he worked 20 hours a day, stealing naps on work benches in corridors, and wherever he could find a quiet place. From 1869, the date of his first patent up to the summer of 1910, no fewer than 1,425 separate patents have been applied for in his name. The height of the activity was in 1882 when 141 patents were applied for. He perfected automatic telegraphy, made a successful typewriter, perfected a device whereby four messages could be sent over the same wire, invented the phonograph and then spent several years working at the new telephone apparatus, perfecting the receiver.

Electric Lamp Men Incident.

The invention of the electric lamp was but an incident of those strenuous days. To the problem of subdividing the electric light Edison addressed his genius and all the resources he could command. The world had become familiar already with the gas lamp and was using it in light houses, in public parks and on the streets, but it wanted a light that could be used in small units, comparable with gas and tallow candles, was safe and the oil lamp. That electricity could furnish such a lamp had been believed for many years by scientists, but it was not to be.

Work went on incessantly day and night in those years of 1879 and 1880. Edison's home life was a regular sleepless existence as a result of his devotion to more hours of work. One night he got a wing of two at the laboratory. Some place of concealment could be found for him, even in the middle of the second work a new lamp was built, a new lamp was built, a new lamp was built. Edison's lamp was a new lamp, a new lamp was built, a new lamp was built.

Hunting the World Over.

At the time the world was within the grasp of the electric light, Edison was hunting the world over for the right material that should make the filament of the lamp. He was hunting the world over for the right material that should make the filament of the lamp. He was hunting the world over for the right material that should make the filament of the lamp.

TIGERS MELT DEFEAT AT THE HANDS OF THE AGGIES QUINTET AND SHOW MID-SEASON'S SLUMP TO FARMERS

Team Reverses Form Once More and Proves Poor Match for Opponents: Heat of Room Helped Downfall

In a game replete with poor defense and team work, the Tigers went down to defeat at the hands of the Aggie quintet last night at the Fort Collins Agricultural college. The Colorado college men lacked the pep that characterized their work a week ago Saturday, and showed up poorly in passing and basket shooting. The ball would not roll back on the floor. They were outplayed by the Aggies in every particular.

That their defeat may be in some measure due to the intense heat of the room is the opinion of several of the men. Two of the team suffered with bad headaches as a result of the heat. Evidently the game came at the psychological moment for the mid-season slump, but the men are hopeful for the return game, which will be played at Coonitt gymnasium next Saturday.

Colorado college is fourth in the race for the conference title now, with a percentage of 333, having lost two games and won one. Denver university leads with a percentage of 400, the Aggies running a close second with 399. Boulder is third, with 390 per cent, and the Mines are trailing the league, having lost all their games.

The Tiger lineup for the game last night follows:

Lidstrom, center; Peterson, forwards; Holman, center; Minkus, Taylor.

TOO MUCH WORK FOR THE ATHLETE INJURES HEALTH

Proportion of Deaths Among Competitors Increases in After Life, Says Yale Physical Director

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 13. (At last there is one man prominently connected with college athletics who frankly acknowledges that there is considerable truth in the charges that the development of winnisk teams in the colleges is too much of a business, and that athletes are driven so hard that it injures their health.

Dr. Anderson of Yale has for years been in charge of the physical welfare of Yale's athletic teams, and statistics which he has gathered show that college men do feel their overindulgence in athletics in after life.

Writing in the Yale News, Dr. Anderson says:

"Of the various criticisms made against college athletics none is more firmly based upon facts than that which is aimed against the effects of too great competition on health. A study of the latest data on the longevity of athletes brings us face to face with rather unpleasant conclusions.

"The proportion of deaths among competitors, in after life, increases rather than diminishes. We have ground for belief that the development of winning teams is too much of a business, and that men are actually injured by their exertions rather than benefited.

"The action of the major union in engaging Dr. R. B. Bull to look after the physical interests of those taking part in the four major sports is commendable. He is familiar with the special conditions that are to be found on the field or water.

"The cooperation with the physicians in charge of the Yale gymnasium will in future help to ward off the evil effects of excessive interest in physical competition."

K. C. FRANCHISE IS HEADED FOR NEWARK

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. (Patrick Powers and Harry Sin Clair, owners of the floating Kansas City Federal league franchise, have definitely decided to locate their club in Newark, it was declared tonight by a man prominent in Federal league councils.

This, it was said, however, does not necessarily mean that New York will not be invaded by the Federals this year. It was declared on apparently good authority that another Federal league franchise also will be shifted within the next few days, and that its destination was likely to be Upper Manhattan or the Bronx, in New York city or Cleveland.

It also became known tonight that the Federal league really has an option on the grounds at Kings Bridge, where Frank Farrell had intended to build his park for the New York Americans. William Dwyer, another former owner of the local American, still holds this property. Col. Jacob Huppert Jr., one of the new owners of the Yankees, held a first option on the grounds while the Federal league held a second option. It is said that Huppert has permitted his option to expire, not regarding the property as favorable to his purpose, and that the Yankees consequently now hold a first option.

IS WELSH ON HIS WAY TO THE LAND OF FADED CHAMPS?

World Bacter Has Showed Up Poorly in Ring Since Winning Title

By RINGSIDE. NEW YORK, Feb. 13. (Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, is the anomaly of the modern day prize ring. Here we have an undisputed, undefeated, whose performance since he ascended to the light-weight pinnacle have been mediocre, yet his exhibitions before he attained the 132-pound premier prize were of the superlative order, even good enough for a champion.

Which prompts the question: Has Welsh seen his best days in the ring? One is inclined to answer in the affirmative after witnessing Freddie in his recent bouts. And the suspicion is strengthened by Welsh's own words, uttered the other day, when he said that he expects to retire from the ring within two years.

If Welsh is really the author of these words, they are a frank admission that the lightweight champion does not think he is capable of defending his title until that time. Who ever heard of a newly-crowned pugilist king figuring only two years ahead, planning only each a short time in which to capitalize his championship? It has never been done before, and Freddie Welsh is not such an inventive genius to start his innovation unless he was firm in his conviction that he cannot endure as champion for longer than the period he has stated.

Recent Battles Unworthy.

It is worthy of note that Welsh has not put up one truly good battle since he came into possession of the championship. It is nothing extraordinary; yet he managed to shear Ritchie of his title. It was Ritchie's poor boxing rather than Welsh's superior boxing ability that cost the American the championship.

Let us review some of Welsh's bouts since that fateful day in July of last year. Freddie's first bout as a champion occurred against Matty Baldwin. Poor Matty Baldwin, a marvel in his day, was able to hold Welsh on even terms for most of the 12 rounds, and the decision only when Freddie came through with two good last rounds.

A few weeks later Jimmy Duffy, clearly outpointed Welsh in a 10-round bout, but as the referee was not empowered to render a decision Freddie clung to his title. Some little time after that Charles White hooked up with the Briton for 10 rounds in Milwaukee, and a majority of the so-called experts said that White was indisputably the victor.

Then Welsh came to the metropolis and permitted himself to be shown up by Young Shugart, who lacks Welsh's experience by something like 10 years. The other day Willie Beecher, untrained, hog fat, going on at a few hours' notice in place of Charley White, held Welsh even for half the bout. True, Beecher "blew" in the last five rounds, but it was not Welsh's demoralized fighting that caused Willie to explode, rather it was Beecher's poor condition that was responsible for his state bordering on collapse.

In several other bouts since he became champion Welsh failed to show his old brand of fighting. He has shown his utter lack of boxing skill, especially in keeping his opponent from slipping too much of a lead.

For a time it appeared as if Welsh would be nicknamed "The Outpointed Champion," for no less than three adversaries in a row gained the popular decision over him.

But in the Olden Days.

Now to harken back to the olden days, when Welsh was not a champion, yet was fighting like one. It was only in 1908 that Welsh fought the then great Paddy McFarland, two terrific rounds. The first, a 10-round affair in Milwaukee, was awarded to Paddy, but the second, fought at Vernon, Cal., resulted in a draw after 25 brilliant rounds. That same year Welsh gained a 10-round decision over Abe Attell, then featherweight champion. The bout, however, was fought at quarterweights, with no title in the balance.

In 1909 Welsh trounced Johnny Sumner, who was at the zenith of his power at the time. The year following the present lightweight boss fought Paddy McFarland another hard draw, which went 20 rounds before a London referee. Several months later Welsh won over Jean Driscoll on a foul in nine rounds. At the time Driscoll was considered the cleverest boxer in the ring.

It was in 1911 that Welsh first confronted Ritchie in the ring. Willie substituted for Ad Wolgast, then the champion, and Welsh had all he could do to outbox the unknown Ritchie. Just previous to the meeting, Welsh earned a 10-round decision over Matty Baldwin, who then was fighting in the best form.

Fights Like a Champion.

Just a year after the Ritchie fight in 1912, Welsh retained Matty White of the lightweight championship. Freddie's first round of his career in the prize ring was a contest in the interior of the state, and there he was outboxed by Matty Baldwin. The date was October 26, 1911. A date Welsh will long remember. The fight ended in a tie, in the ninth round, with Baldwin claiming a knock-out and Welsh a manager producing a water claim that Freddie was felled.

It got into the record books as a victory on foot for Welsh. Strange as it may seem, Welsh seemed to have put off his retirement in that fight, for since that day he has not put up one really good fight, a battle up to his old standard. Welsh, A. C. H. of the world, even after virtually admitting that as champion he will not last much longer.

New Orleans, the new boxing scene, is the scene of an interesting fight.

JESS WILLARD IS AFTER BIG SMOKE WITH VENGEANCE

White Hope Has Hardest Kind of Training; Champs Are Helping

By WILLIAM H. ROCAP. Jack Johnson's admirers and press agents for other fighters would have the sporting public believe that Jess Willard is a mere novice and lacks experience. In some respects their claims are true. Willard has not been before the public as much as other aspirants for the heavyweight title. One reason for that is because Willard has been more fortunate than the other heavies. When he placed himself under the wing of Tom Jones his worries were over. Jones makes haste slowly and few mistakes. Willard has refused matches with lesser lights—Jones, not Willard, is responsible for that.

Jones is not a green man in the game. He is playing his cards the way he did when he made champions of Billy Papke, The Illinois Thunderbolt, and Ad Wolgast, the Michigan Wildcat. He wanted Johnson. He has landed his man, too. Don't imagine for one moment Jones has carried Willard in idleness. Big Jess has been drilled hour after hour and day after day. Behind closed doors in Jones' home, for the past six months, the big Kansan has been put through the hardest kind of training stunts with husky sparring partners. Many stories could be written of happenings there. Many an aspiring heavy was put to sleep with a punch. Strange as it may seem, too, more than one of the "hopes" dropped for the count in Jones' quarters are now being hoisted by press agents as fit opponents for the Kansas giant.

Willard will sit himself for his coming battle with Jack Johnson at the Knobloch ranch, which is on the Yuma division of the El Paso electric railway. It lies down the Rio Grande river. The trip to the training camp is made in 20 minutes. Special trains leave the Plaza at 1:45, 2 and 2:30 p. m. daily, carrying thousands to the ranch in time to see the big cowboy in his opening training stunt at 2:45. The visitors are whisked back to the city immediately after. Willard concludes his daily routine. No intermediate stops are made between the ranch and the city, going or coming. The ranch is a one-story, 18-room brick residence, which is used for living quarters. Mrs. Tom Jones supervises the equipment department, which is in charge of Ed Walker, chef, and two assistants.

Willard does all his training in the open air.

Fifty yards back of the house is a hayrack, open on three sides. In this open structure, a 20-foot ring has been erected. A heavy wrestling mat covers the floor of the ring, which is elevated three feet from the ground. Pulleys, hanging bag ceilings and other athletic appliances adorn the solitary wall.

Willard has with him at present Walter Monahan, the Pasadena heavyweight, Jack Hemple of San Francisco, and "Tex" O'Rourke, a Midland county (Tex.) giant, who is very handy with his fists. Others who will be there include Jim Savage, the New York heavyweight; Jim Flynn, who has fought them all, including the big black, and Yusif Hussame, the Turkish grappler. Flynn will teach Willard what he learned in his battle with Johnson in Las Vegas, N. M., July 4, 1912. Hussame will attend to rough work in the clinches, while Monahan, Savage, Hemple and O'Rourke will all round bout between lightweights to-morrow afternoon. Johnny Dundee, the New York "chumping" Jack, and Joe Mandel, the New Orleans "baker boy," are involved, and the winner has been promised a match with champion Welsh.

Tomorrow's match was originally scheduled between Mandel and Ad Wolgast, but for some unexplained reason Wolgast has withdrawn and Dundee substituted.

Willard will add his title. Jim Jeffries will be present in an advisory capacity.

Willard is up at 6 o'clock, breakfasts at 7, an hour later goes on the road in company with Hemple. At 3 p. m. he starts his gymnasium work of two hours. Bedtime is 9 o'clock.

Walter Monahan has a boxing school in Pasadena, Cal. He has trained both Jeffries and Johnson. He acted as Johnson's sparring partner for eight months. He taught Johnson to use successfully the right uppercut he won most of his battles with. Johnson at one time offered to back him against anybody in the world for $10,000 a side.

Johnson called Monahan from Paris engaging him for the Mexico fight. He was informed that Willard had beaten him to his services. Monahan is drilling Willard in the use of the right uppercut and the step for it.

If the writer were asked what he considered the biggest asset in favor of Jess Willard's chances in his coming fight with Jack Johnson, the answer would be that the main thing in favor of Willard is the number of experts, and so-called expert authorities, who are picking him for a sure loser.

That the betting odds as well as the expert opinions count for little can easily be figured out by taking a look at 99 out of every 100 championship fights in the last 20 years. Let us start with the Corbett-Sullivan fight, which took place in New Orleans in 1892. Who could count on the fingers of one hand the number of critics in the entire world who gave Corbett even an outside chance to win. The betting was 5 to 1 against him, and thousands of dollars of Sullivan money could not be covered even at that price.

A committee has already been appointed to arrange for the second annual endurance run of the Vanders Motor cycle Touring club, which will be held on June 20.

HIGH SCHOOL FIVES SHOW GOOD FORM IN INTER CLASS GAMES

Freshmen Defeat Sophs, While Juniors Prove Too Much for Seniors

The high school interclass games at the Y. M. C. A. last night gave the spectators a chance to see some of the speediest and smoothest basketball of the season, despite the fact that none of the first team men were allowed to play. The "fresh" proved too much for the "sophomores" five and trimmed them, 25 to 24. That the trimming was small is evident from the score and neither team felt sure of victory until the last moment. The juniors won from the senior aggregation by 20 to 17, owing to the lack of practice the upper-class team did not put up a very good showing against the juniors.

A round robin tourney will be staged this week in order to decide the superiority of the first three teams, which are so evenly matched that a choice would be difficult. Some of the basketball last night was considered fully as fast as the brand offered in some of the Terror games.

The freshman lineup follows: Bruce and Bates, forwards; Saffranek, center, and Hunt and Maxwell, guards. Sophomores: Swope, Elliott and Walker, forwards; Carroll, center, and Cheese and Shepp, guards. The seniors were so closely matched that the game was in doubt up to the last moment. Shoup, started for the Sophs and proved a young speed king as well as formidable defensive bulk. He threw four field goals, and two fouls, scoring 10 of the 24 points scored by his side.

The junior lineup consisted of Graham and Franz, forwards; Whitehead, center, and Parker, Newell and Jackson, guards. The seniors had Vaughn and Baker, forwards; Wolff, center, and Dickinson and Perry, guards.

The halves were 15 minutes. Referee, St. John; umpire, Stanford.

MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS ARE PRUNING PAYROLLS; BRAVES ALONE TO OPEN SEASON WITH INCREASED SALARIES

Athletics Will Whittle $55,000 Off Their Expenses; Phillies Clip $26,000 and White Sox Come Down $15,000

By FRANK G. MENKE.
NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The major league teams have decided to cut down their payrolls to such an extent that they have whittled a total of over $100,000 from the 1914 payrolls. And the ax swinging hasn't ceased.

The magnates must retrench. They lost money in 1914 and they don't want to duplicate it in 1915. There was but one way open—the trimming down of payrolls. The Boston Braves alone will operate with an increased salary list.

The Athletics payroll in 1915 will be smaller, proportionately, than any other club in either the American or National leagues. The Athletics have turned loose Eddie Plank, Jack Coombs, Chief Bender and Eddie Collins. Collins, it was reported, got $9,000 and Bender and Plank averaged no less than $5,000 each. Coombs was drawing down something like $4,000, if not more.

The release and sale of that quartet has reduced the Athletics' payroll by $55,000. Other releases or sales of high-salaried Athletics stars may be made before the season opens.

Of course, the Athletics have gathered in Lajoie and his $30,000 contract, but the story is that Connie Mack and his crowd will pay only half of the great Frenchman's salary. The other half will be paid by Lajoie's former boss, Charles Somers.

Naps Expect Small Payroll.

The Cleveland Naps hope to operate with a payroll that will be about $20,000 less than it was in 1914. The first move was the sale of Lajoie. Some of the other Nap players, who were charged with attempting to disrupt the team in 1914 are slated to go. Most of them are high-priced players. Furthermore, the Naps intend to operate during the 1915 season with the minimum number of men—a figure around 21 or 22. In other years the Naps carried about 30 men.

Steve Yerkes, a high-priced gem who used to second base for the Red Sox has gone. "Heinie" Wagner, the shortstop with his $5,000 salary is slated for the discard. The Red Sox owners plan to cut payroll at least 20 other high-priced veterans. Last year the Red Sox carried about 30 men. This season they will operate with less than 25.

The Phillies will effect a big saving in 1915. Charles Dooin, one-time manager, who shook down the Phillies for $5,000 has gone. Hans Lobert, whose salary was around $5,000 and Sherwood Magee, drawing about the same amount, have flitted onward. Pitcher Marshall, with his $3,000 salary, is with the Phillies no longer. Several youngsters whose salaries totaled around $5,000 have gone.

A Saving of $26,000.

The Phillies, through the sale or release of their 1914 stars and youngsters, will effect a gross saving of $26,000. Through trades they have acquired Milton Stock, third baseman, Al Demaree, pitcher, and a catcher, Adams. The total salaries for these men will not go over $10,000, making the net saving about $16,000.

The Braves is the only team in either league that will operate in 1915 on a salary schedule higher than that of 1914. The Boston players deserved a boost in pay for their 1914 showing—and Owner Gaffney gave it to them. Salary boosts will add about $20,000 to the Braves' payroll in 1915. The Braves acquired Sherwood Magee and in doing so they acquired a man who will add another $5,000 to the payroll. The Chicago White Sox expect to operate at a cost of about $15,000 less than they did in 1914. "Kid" Gleason, coach of the club. "Ping" Bodie has gone back to the minors and Berger, Slight, and Blackburne have been let out. The Sox payroll slumps about $10,000 thereby.

The Brooklyn Dodgers released Ed Reulbach who got about $5,000 during 1914. The Dodgers are figuring on letting two or three other veterans loose, in addition to a bunch of youngsters. The total Dodgers saving ought to be around $15,000.

Tigers to Keep Stars.

The Detroit Tigers will not let any of their high-priced men go, but they will operate with as few men as possible. Against an average between 25 and 30 men last year, the Tigers will operate in 1915 with about 22. That means a saving of $7,500 to $10,000.

The Pirates' plan is to let one or two of the fading stars loose. Also they will get rid of their surplus youngsters. Konetchy and his high salary have gone over to the Reds. The Pirates, all in all, ought to save about $16,000 at the least.

Lee Magee with a salary of $7,200, Ivy Wingo, drawing down about $4,500 and "Pal" Peritt who got about $4,000, have departed from the Cardinals. That means a saving of $15,700. Of course, several of the Cardinals will get boosts in pay because of their great work in 1914, but the boosts won't average more than $1,000 each. Therefore, the net saving of the Cardinals will be around $10,000.

Giants Payroll Less.

The Giants' payroll will be less than it was in 1914. The Giants acquired Lobert, who was getting about $5,000. They got rid of Demaree, Stock and Adams, whose totaled contracts called for about $10,000. That means a net saving of $5,000. If Marquard doesn't come back it means a saving of $7,000 more.

The Senators turned "German" Schaefer adrift. That saves about $2,000. The Cincinnati Reds will reduce their payroll by about $5,000 through sales, trades releases and desertions, even though they have acquired Charlie Dooin and his $6,000 salary and Ivy Wingo, with a salary of about $4,000.

The Cubs are planning to turn loose a half dozen veterans and at least nine youngsters. They expect to operate with 21 men during 1915. If they do that means a saving of at least $15,000. The few changes that will be made in the salary schedule of the Browns will be toward reductions.

The Yankees will operate at a lower cost than in 1914 because they won't have Frank Chance and his $20,000 salary to pay. Some of the Yankee players have been given boosts in their 1915 salaries, but this will be offset by the dropping off of at least six or seven surplus players.

WINSTON WINS NATIONAL SQUASH TENNIS TOURNAMENT

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Eric S. Winston of the Harvard Squash club won the championship title of the National Squash Tennis association here today. In the final match of the tournament he defeated his clubmate Louis Dupont Irvine, in three straight games, 15-4, 15-2 and 15-8.

Quartet Whose Release Saves the Athletics $25,000.

The Braves of Boston are the only team in either of the two older major leagues which will start the 1915 season with an increased salary list. Retrenchment is the order of the day. The most aggressive economy exponents are the erstwhile world champion Philadelphia Athletics. They began by getting rid of $26,000 worth of talent in the persons of Plank, Coombs, Bender and Collins. Other releases may follow.

WHITNEY WILL GET INTO SADDLE FOR POLO GAMES

Greatest Captain to Revive Interest in Game; May Be on Next American Team

Polo adherents will be glad to learn that Harry Payne Whitney, called by some the greatest polo captain that ever guided a team to victory, will take more personal interest in polo this year than he did last. In 1913 he was unable to play because of an injured shoulder, received while hunting. He is now recovered and will take part in several games the coming season.

Whitney's return to the saddle does not necessarily mean that he will again be a member of the American team which will go to England after the cup if the war ceases. Previous to the mishap Whitney declared it would not be a member of the team that would defend the cup.

The reason he advanced was that the training necessary to perfect his physical condition for the international polo series was too severe and he did not care to undergo the ordeal. But, with Whitney in the saddle again next year he may round into form gradually and thus lead up to the possibility of his being one of the American four who may challenge for the cup in 1916. The date of the challenge will depend on the continuation of the war.

Whitney now has 26 polo ponies in his winter training quarters. This is the largest individually owned string in the country.

Once Weaklings Now Physically Perfect

Freddie Welsh and Charlie White were given up by doctors at the age of 16 years. They were pronounced physical weaklings, with but a few years to live.

Today these once frail flat-chested boys stand at the top of the boxing profession, physical marvels, powerful human motors of strength and endurance. Of course, training did it. But not training alone. Determination and a natural application brought to these two the athletic perfection and boxing skill which make them light champions.

Welsh attributes his physique to the fact that he is a vegetarian. He has not tasted meat since the time as a boy he was told he had not much chance to spend many years among us. At 25 he is perhaps the perfectest boxer in the ring.

Warned by physicians White's parents sent him to Hill O'Connell. While taking his regular exercises Charlie developed a high speed with the gloves. Two years later the frail kid, developed into a pretty tough young fellow was fighting the best of the others. Charlie is now 23 years of age.

Two years ago White's greatest ambition was to get a match with Jack Kilbane. But the feather weight class could not hold him and with a few added pounds he is the best of the lightweights.

60 MILES AN HOUR! CAN SPEED BOATS MAKE IT?

"Baby Speed-Demon" Holds Record for 1914 of Mile in One Minute 20 Seconds

By E. H. ROSENBERGER
What will the season of 1915 bring forth in the way of championships? This was one of the questions uppermost in the minds of yachtsmen as they viewed the exhibits at the big motorboat show in Madison Square Garden last week. Another important question that was agitating the minds of the speed bugs was: Will we reach 60 miles an hour this year?

There are all sorts of championships, but only two championships of national importance in the racing game. One is that of the hydroplane, or, speaking generally, the speed boat and the other is that of the cruiser class. There are many variations in both classes, and in many races several subdivisions of each of the two general classes. In the speed boat class we have the high powered hydroplanes, the low-powered hydroplane and likewise the displacement racer in its several classes according to ratings. But when one talks of a national championship in the speed boat class, there can be but one reference and that is the fastest boat afloat to make an official record. That boat naturally is a hydroplane for it is only an exaggerated form of the speed boat.

Which was a fairly the fastest boat built last year was a matter of dispute. The official records show Baby Speed Demon II, owned by Mrs. Paul H. Blackton as the champion. The American Power Boat association records give her official speed for one mile at Lake George as 60.21. She has other interesting records, but this one gives her the best performance available for the sake of comparison. In connection with this championship question, frequent publications give "Disturber IV," owned by Commodore James Pugh of Chicago, the credit of being the champion. This is the boat which started for England to participate in the international motorboat race for the Harcourt trophy at Cowes. The race was called off on account of the European war, and as a result no record was made for that contest in 1914. Sixty miles an hour has been the aim of speed boat constructors for several years. One of the Blackton boats was to make this according to promise when built but she never did and it is not likely that Commodore Jim Pugh's boat can go a mile in a minute. Among yachtsmen gathered at the show opinion prevailed that the boat would be true to her name so far as disturbing championship records was concerned. There is a feeling that some time this summer this boat will snatch championship honors away from the Blackton fleet unless Commodore Blackton builds something faster than he has now.

In the cruiser class "Flareaway III," which was B. Taylor's, carried off the championships in 1914. This is the boat that came down from Port Washington, N. Y., and sailed rings around the Delaware river boats. "Flareaway III" made the 34 1/2 nautical miles from Camden to Philadelphia, by way of Cape Charles, in 24 hours and 36 minutes, stopping twice to take on fuel. This is the record given her by the officials of the American Power Boat association. The record is a national record that would create envy in the mind of any owner.

BEST WINTER SPORT TO KILL AND BURY THE INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Prexy Barrows Has Hard Time to Keep the Association Together When the Newspapers Bunticate It Annually

By FRANK G. MENKE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Ed G. Barrows, who is president of the International league, has come to the conclusion that this is a harsh cruel world. He is doing everything, but he can't hold his league together, but pretty nearly every morning he awakes to find that some newspaper gent has shot his league to pieces and dumped the pieces into a scrap heap.

Busting, the International league seems to be one of the most popular winter sports among the newspaper folks here and hereabouts. When the boys have nothing else to write about, they draw their typewriters up close and pound the International league into bankruptcy.

Barrows admits that the league isn't in what might be called a strategic position. And Barrows doesn't try to kid the public into believing that it is. He admits frankly, that the league's affairs aren't in extremely good shape, but he says that this condition doesn't mean the dissolution of the league.

And we believe what Barrows says. Barrows, in denying the various reports that the league is going to turn up its toes and furnish a job for the undertaker puts forth some logical reasons. Here they are:

The magnates of the International league have about $1,000,000 at stake. That covers stands, grounds, players and similar assets. Among the mak-nage in the league are Joseph Lajoie, owner of the Red Sox, Charles Somers, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers and other men who have been identified with baseball for more than a score of years.

"These men have too much at stake to quit simply because the league just now is a bit rough. It is true that the 1915 season won't mean a financial success for us."

The 1915 season outlook isn't extremely bright. But the men who are identified with the International league aren't in the game for just a year or two. They are sticklers—and they are good sportmen. They know they can't always win and they are willing to suffer a loss. If necessary, hopeful that better times are coming in the near future.

The International league will open the 1915 season just what the circuit will be has not been decided as yet. There is plenty of time. The Jersey City-Syracuse proposition has held up, but we expect to make some definite arrangement concerning the Jersey City transfer very shortly.

It is possible—but not probable that we will operate with a six-club circuit in 1915. That matter is under consideration but it is being considered only in a vague way. Our present plans call for an eight-club circuit.

The newspaper gang that is making life unhappy for Barrows, prints yarns that seem to have no basic foundation. They do not quote any actual person as passing out the reports concerning the alleged deplorable conditions in the International league. They merely state that, "I hear that the International league is close to bankruptcy" or "Reports from the side have it that the International league won't open the season."

Those yarns that attempt to show that the International league is on the brink of ruin, make statements to this effect:

"The owners of the Buffalo club are in financial straits and are not keen about putting more money into the league, the war has affected sports in Toronto and Montreal, and the drawing power of baseball there will be reduced to a minimum this year, Richmond, which takes Baltimore's place, is an uncertain proposition. Newark has moved on the International league representation, and with 'Wild Bill' Donovan removed from the management job, Providence won't support the club as it did in other years."

"Stories of that kind do harm to the league harm to the club owners and they do no one good," said Barrows. "They can be classed as stories that are little better than pipe stories for the conditions cited by those writers are gross exaggerations of real conditions and they tend to give the public the wrong impression concerning the International league in the present and its future."

Kilbane Wins From Morgan in 6 Rounds

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13.—Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, had the better of a six-round bout here tonight with Eddie Morgan of England. The first two rounds were about even and from then to the end of the fight Kilbane showed championship form to the disadvantage of Morgan. Tonight was the second time the two men had met in three weeks in six-round bouts.

Here and There

Golf on the Stage.

From the Golfers Magazine.
Harry Vardon, the British open champion has received a flattering offer to go into vaudeville in America, and it is said he will accept if an act can be framed as an excuse for his appearance on the stage.

A golf sketch has been written for Vardon, during which the champion will show his method of driving, approaching and putting. He will also illustrate many difficult shots.

Who Fights the Fight, Anyway?

From the Pittsburgh Dispatch.
Nearly every fight manager believes—and perhaps he is right, that he is the principal member of the firm of Manager and Fighter. The letters to the newspapers written by these managers usually contain more about "I" than about "He."

One of these letter writing persons brought into the office the other day a statement full of circus language. The sporting editor read it over.

"Who's going to fight this fight?" he asked.

"Did you read it?" asked the manager.

"Sure. That's what aroused my curiosity."

It Was a Pretty Thing

From the Golfers Magazine.
A woman who has not been playing golf as long as you have in a tournament at the Lakeside club of Tacoma. The only club she had was a flimsy. She drove around in a putter and played in the bunkers with the one club.

Why didn't you bring your other club? asked a woman friend.

"Too much trouble to carry them all around," replied the one club player. "So I picked out the prettiest one."

Golf the Siren of Games.

From the Golfers Magazine.

If you desire a golf course, get it with whole soul—until succumbing to some vagrant temptation you find, as is the way with novices, that the game is absurdly easy and not an impossible way of spending an afternoon. Then you are doomed. For the next day is sure to end in humiliating failure. Your pride is plucked. You are determined not to be beaten by a so absurdly simple game. You take lessons. And more unexpected difficulties and before long your real neurosis in life is golf.

GOTCH TO WRESTLE IN MOVIES FOR $25,000

HEMLOCK, Ia. Feb. 13.—Champion Frank Gotch has gone into training to wrestle for a movie picture company. He will get approximately $25,000.

Gotch's opponent has not yet been selected, and it is probable that in order to get one it will be necessary to hold an elimination tournament in Chicago or elsewhere, the winner to have the honor of going on the mat with Gotch for the championship before the movie picture operator.

There are four men in mind now for the match: a friend of Gotch's, they are Hussane, the Turk, Stecher, the recent former find, Charley Cutler, and this unknown Ed White's Mystery.

Annual Country Club Ball.

A fitting climax to a winter social season, notable for its big festivities, was the annual ball of the Cheyenne Mountain Country Club, given Friday evening at Broadmoor. The ballroom and dining room, howered with evergreen and joughis and adorned with myriad electric lights, the spacious porches, warm heated, festooned with Japanese lanterns and hung with rich rugs for the dancers; the perfect harmony of every aspect, all reflected the good taste and industry of the committee on arrangements, Messrs. Butler Williamson, Wilmer D. Hemming, William M. Randol and George Buell Russell. The decorations have been more gorgeous; they never were more pleasing or happily chosen. Jeopardy's orchestra blended its strains in exquisite accord with such an atmosphere.

While the lamentable illness of Mrs. Horace G. Lunt, who was to have been in the receiving line, was deeply regretted by all those who turned upon the guests the famous hospitality of the County club amply did their part toward dissipating dullness. Receiving were Mrs. Charles Fox Gardner, Mrs. Charles T. Lowndes, Mrs. D. Bryant Turner and Mrs. William M. Randol. Among the most brightly attired guests were the following:

Mrs. S. Edwin Solly, blue satin, trimmed with real lace.

In addition to offerings from the civilian population, the consignment will also be glad to receive and forward garments for the Belgian soldiers. These parcels should be marked "For soldiers." Woolen socks are most needed, and will be in demand throughout the spring and summer.

About 1,000 articles comprised the third shipment, which was made up of offerings contributed by 21 organizations and 49 independent individuals. A contribution of money was turned in by the Women's Study club of Colorado City.

WHO'LL FEED THE FIGHTERS ?

With the Exception of Russia None of Warring Nations Can Pro- duce Pro- visions for Their Sol- diers Un- less Sci- entists Can Increase Crops

The old statement of Napoleon that an army travels on its belly is being brought home with force in Europe where scientists not only are working to invent new guns, but are also trying to devise methods for raising bigger crops.

When Germany declared war on Russia she did a daring thing, for Russia had been feeding Germany. Germany had been giving Russia manufactured articles, but Russia had been giving Germany the stuff of life. People can live without manufactured goods, but they cannot live without food. Germany with her millions in such a small area, has not been able to produce food enough for her people. England is far from producing enough food for her own people, but her colonies are big food producers. France has a smaller population for her area than other European countries, but she has to buy food abroad. Belgium, Serbia, Japan, Montenegro, Austria and Turkey are in the same lot with the rest.

If the lands of these countries could be turned into more productive fields it would mean much to the warring people. Just now the Allies are getting enough to eat by shipping in food from the colonies, Argentina and the United States. On the other hand Germany is hard pressed. She has no chance for making imports and if her land could be made to produce enough food for her people it is believed she could hold out against the world indefinitely. It is plain the plan of war on the part of the Allies is to starve Germany into submission. Can she do it? It depends on the scientists of Germany. If they can make two heads of wheat grow where only one grew last year they will be able to get food enough for their men.

That England's plan of fighting is a plan of starvation can readily be seen from Kitchener's instructions to his expeditionary forces, which was sent to France last August. Kitchener told his men in an open letter that they would do most of their fighting on the soil of a friendly nation. Evidently he simply wanted the men to hold the French frontier, keeping the Germans from getting food and make them sue for peace.

That German agents have studied the Burbank methods of increasing the food production is believed. The Germans are planting Burbank potatoes. Their own scientists who are as skilled as Burbank in the development of plants are also working on new forms of production to increase the food supply.

Luther Burbank recently gave his opinions on the European War. He pointed to the folly of fighting. Germany, he pointed out, was not after land. She wanted expansion of her commerce. He said: "Now Germany could gain her commercial supremacy quicker by finding new products and new manufactures. This is going to be the lesson of the present war, and the time will come very soon when nations will offer each other, not bullets, or bayonets, but richer grains, better fruits and fatter flocks."

"I say this because I still have faith in civilization."

There is going to be a long period of peace—probably centuries—and the only thing that will interrupt this is a real racial war, which I am afraid is bound to come between the yellow race and the white race.

National lines are going to mean less in the future. They will tend to have only geographical significance. All the world will be interested in the development of certain portions of the world for its food production.

"Scientists in twenty years, with proper development, will be able to feed the entire world on wheat, ordinary wheat will do it. I have worked on a wheat right now which has a head three times as large as ordinary wheat. It should do well in Siberia and in any country where wheat does well now."

"I am glad to see the Burbank potato is doing well in Germany. They will, no doubt, have to rely upon the potato as a good deal there, but with the new ways at work, it looks as though the women would have to do the work."

ALLIED SOLDIERS FATTEN ON RATIONS.

The Allies have far more food than the German soldiers. The Germans began figuring on the food problem early last August. They realized they not only had to have food for their soldiers, but for their people as well.

But there are many soldiers of the English who have lived in poverty all their lives, and who actually founder on the wealth of food in the trenches.

An officer writes home to lament the number of pounds he has added to his weight in the trenches, saying he feels almost too well without sufficient exercise.

Napoleon would be astonished at the enormous demands upon the endurance of the men in this war, for he was never able to give his men the strengthening food well regulated armies receive nowadays.

Attention is called, for instance, to the battle of Lae Ruygas. The Turks lost because they had been starving for four days. The Bulgarians had their stomachs full. The Turks were willing, but could not fight and on their retreat many died of sheer starvation. The Belgians and in many cases the Germans in Belgium have been weakened by lack of food, although the German system in general is excellent. But the British soldier has received his meals with great regularity.

Here is a list showing what each British private receives every twenty-four hours:

1 1/2 pounds of fresh meat or 1 pound preserved meat.
1 1/2 pounds bread.
4 ounces cheese.

1 1/2 ounces jam.
12 ounces sugar.
12 pound of fresh vegetables or 12 ounces dried vegetables.

12 ounces of tea, coffee or cocoa.
12 ounces of tobacco or 30 cigarettes per week.

In former British wars there has been enormous corruption and waste, and the soldiers have often gone hungry. Luckily, for two years before the war broke out the director of supplies and his staff had been studying every detail of the new method, so that when the great war came the whole scheme was complete and perfect, both as regards supplies and transport.

The Germans are more sparing in the use of meat. They have studied the food problem scientifically and have found many vegetable substitutes for meat which do very well. The fighting qualities of the Germans show they stand up well without having so much meat. The English are known as beef eaters. They also eat white bread, while the Germans eat whole wheat bread, which is recognized as more nourishing than the white bread.

Besides the whole wheat bread allows for no waste of the product.

The substitution of cheaper but nutritious vegetables for more expensive meats is the remedy for the high cost of living, according to Dean H. L. Watts of the Pennsylvania State College.

Dean Watts said much in praise of the so-called derived bean and the incompressible pea as logical and healthful meat substitutes. He also took occasion to criticize State-endowed colleges that neglect the interests of the tax payers as a whole to concentrate on the instruction of a few students.

The average housewife, Mr. Watts said, pays for her incomplete knowledge of the possibilities of vegetable cookery with heavy butchers' bills.

"It has always been admitted," he said, "that a vegetable diet is more wholesome than one composed largely of meat. If a large list of vegetables is available for the table, it is possible to serve of the body and at the same time maintain the very best health. I mean to say that by making use of the large list of vegetables which will meet all the needs of vegetables which may be grown in this country, it is possible to establish a nourishing diet without very much meat. If peas and beans were used more largely in the diet of the winter months, the cost of living would be materially reduced."

"The whole country," said Mr. Watts, in the course of his address, "is astir at this time with reference to the extension service, provided by our government and various agricultural colleges and experiment stations. We have come to the conclusion that the campus of a college is not the few acres surrounding the college building, but the entire State."

No tax-supported institution has the right to limit its instruction to the few hundred students who enroll annually in its courses, but every soil filler of the State who helps to support the agricultural college, has a right to demand the instruction which he needs. There is danger right now of our vegetable growers being overlooked in the extension campaign which is being waged in every State in the Union."

WAR BOOSTING COST OF ALL MEATS.

The war has had a tendency to boost the price of meats everywhere. Meat has been the food of soldiers for all time. They insist they need it, but this war is going to teach them that they can do without it. Never was there such a scarcity of meat in the world as today. The result is the soldiers will have to be fed more and more on vegetable substitutes. But the people at large will be deprived of the meat first. The soldiers will be the last to suffer. This was well illustrated at Lodz, Poland, which when captured by the Germans had not enough food for the inhabitants. The Russians had seized it all for the soldiers.

Dispatches from there after the Germans captured Lodz in January said the city, which for months has been alternately in Russian and German possession, has been cut off from normal railroad communication since the beginning of the war. The railroads, when running, have been required for the movement of troops, supplies and ammunition. Consequently no meat has been brought in and only a limited quantity of food for the civil population has been received. The American relief work, which has done so much for Brussels and other Belgian cities, would be impossible here until more adequate means of communication are available.

Only one hospital in town is heated, and that is occupied as headquarters by the Military Governor and his staff. Guests in the others must shiver. The streets are jammed with the idle and unemployed. Lodz has always been a city of many beggars, but now they are encountered at every step; non-professionals, it can plainly be seen, driven by real need to appeal to German officers and soldiers and other visitors for help. A "beg day" was held a day or so ago to raise money for the most pressing needs and begs were seen on virtually every uniform.

There is little kerosene left in town and the stock of candles is exhausted. Residents of means still have gas or electric light, the authorities having so far succeeded in keeping the plants in operation, but the poorer people either sit in darkness or burn turpentine and other substitutes. The supply of these is very short.

The German authorities are devoting full attention to this problem.

"We have at the frontier," said Major General von Gehrbke, Military Governor of Lodz, "a train of supplies intended for Lodz. The supplies were in readiness earlier, as soon as we knew with fair certainty that we would soon be again in Lodz. Only railroad difficulties prevent us bringing them in."

"The question of fuel is acute. I visited one of the hospitals a few days ago and found it unheated. The surgeon was unable to perform necessary operations. So I issued an order to turn over all available coal to the hospitals. We hope to get coal from the Russian coal fields in Poland, all of which are now in our possession. We shall not have to draw on German coal supplies."

How Europe is drawing on the United States for food is well illustrated in the report of the Department of Commerce for the last few months. It looks as though the American farmer is entering on a period of great prosperity.

Five times as much wheat and six times as much corn were exported in December as in the same month in 1913. Flour exports increased more than 68 per cent for the same period. Fresh beef increased more than twelvefold, and the exports of "breadstuffs" which includes nearly all the staple grains, generally increased five times. The department's summary says:

"Wheat exports in December aggregated 23,875,217 bushels, or five times the quantity in December, 1913, namely, 5,734,027. The average export price last December was $1.25 per bushel, against 93 cents in December one year earlier."

"Of flour this month's export movement was 68 1/2 per cent more than in December, 1913, being 1,318,327 barrels, compared with 1,079,249, and the value thereof was $2,473,950, compared with $1,902,223."

"Oats showed a larger total in December than in the entire calendar year 1913. The outward movement totaled 5,202,431 bushels in December last, against 36,738 in December, 1913, and 5,202,717 in the year ending with that month."

"Corn exports in December, 1914, amounted to 4,582,000 bu., valued at $2,354,592, against 749,124, valued at $369,155 in December, 1913. Fresh beef in December showed a total export of 6,594,349 pounds, against 524,430 pounds in December, 1913, and 6,618,831 in the twelve months ending December, 1913."

"Pickled and salted beef doubled quantity of exports, the December total being 2,351,880 pounds, against 1,167,743 pounds in the same month of the preceding year."

"Comparing the export movement of the last two years, wheat increased from 2,385,000 bushels in 1913 to 23,875,217 in 1914, an increase of 10,000 bushels to 12,216,515 bushels in 1913, and 12,216,515 bushels in 1914, an increase of 12,216,515 bushels to 25,029,585, while corn decreased from 44,708,954 bushels to 15,107,410."

"Fresh beef nearly quadrupled, while pickled and salted beef slightly decreased in quantity of exports, the former advancing from 6,618,831 to 23,454,328 pounds, and the latter receding from 21,804,600 to 2,677,268 pounds, though this downward tendency was reversed in the closing months of the year."

"Only one hospital in town is heated, and that is occupied as headquarters by the Military Governor and his staff. Guests in the others must shiver. The streets are jammed with the idle and unemployed. Lodz has always been a city of many beggars, but now they are encountered at every step; non-professionals, it can plainly be seen, driven by real need to appeal to German officers and soldiers and other visitors for help. A "beg day" was held a day or so ago to raise money for the most pressing needs and begs were seen on virtually every uniform."

There is little kerosene left in town and the stock of candles is exhausted. Residents of means still have gas or electric light, the authorities having so far succeeded in keeping the plants in operation, but the poorer people either sit in darkness or burn turpentine and other substitutes. The supply of these is very short."

The German authorities are devoting full attention to this problem."

"We have at the frontier," said Major General von Gehrbke, Military Governor of Lodz, "a train of supplies intended for Lodz. The supplies were in readiness earlier, as soon as we knew with fair certainty that we would soon be again in Lodz. Only railroad difficulties prevent us bringing them in."

"The question of fuel is acute. I visited one of the hospitals a few days ago and found it unheated. The surgeon was unable to perform necessary operations. So I issued an order to turn over all available coal to the hospitals. We hope to get coal from the Russian coal fields in Poland, all of which are now in our possession. We shall not have to draw on German coal supplies."

How Europe is drawing on the United States for food is well illustrated in the report of the Department of Commerce for the last few months. It looks as though the American farmer is entering on a period of great prosperity."

Five times as much wheat and six times as much corn were exported in December as in the same month in 1913. Flour exports increased more than 68 per cent for the same period. Fresh beef increased more than twelvefold, and the exports of "breadstuffs" which includes nearly all the staple grains, generally increased five times. The department's summary says:

"Wheat exports in December aggregated 23,875,217 bushels, or five times the quantity in December, 1913, namely, 5,734,027. The average export price last December was $1.25 per bushel, against 93 cents in December one year earlier."

FRUIT GROWERS PLAN TO ELIMINATE WASTE BY USE OF BY-PRODUCTS AND ALSO BY CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

Steps were taken by leading fruit growers of the Pacific Northwest at a recent meeting in Spokane, toward the formation of a co-operative association designed to make use of surplus fruits and vegetables through the manufacture of by-products.

The meeting was the most important feature of the seventh National Fruit and Fruit Products Congress, following a two-day instruction of conditions in the fruit and vegetable industry of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. A committee reported in favor of attacking the problem by co-operative effort. The following named members, each of whom is prominent in orchard affairs in his district, were appointed to organize a central by-product association:

H. M. Sloan, Sitter Root, Mont.; P. H. Weyrauch, Walla Walla; G. C. Cawley, Spokane; Conrad Rice, Whatcom; Alexander Miller, North Yakima; W. H. Paulthaus, I. Valley; Fruit and Butler, Hood River, D. A. Snyder, Dayton, Ore.; J. H. Holt, Eugene, Ore.; M. J. Higgins, Pringle, Idaho.

These officers will be in more extensive than the formation of the typical co-operative organization, as they are instructed by the congress to take such action as they may find practical in bringing the existing fruit selling agencies into more harmonious action to eliminate destructive selling competition.

H. G. Sampson, of Spokane, the man who was largely responsible for the co-operative organization of Northwestern fruit growers in a national marketing agency known as the Northwest Fruit Distributors, and who was chairman of the committee, which conducted the survey of conditions during the last year, submitted a report showing the findings of this committee.

He reported a total fruit acreage in the Northwest of 605,000 acres, which would produce ultimately 1,000,000 cars of fruit of which the railroads could furnish 30,000 cars and 2,000,000 cars could be stored in the Northwest, leaving a total of 100,000 cars to be cared for in by-product plants.

In 1914, according to the report, 12,000 cars of apples in the Northwest, 10,000 cars were consumed in the home and the other fruit not taken in home or good enough to be widely marketed.

"Growers must adjust their ideas away from the bases of the high prices of a few years ago to a basis of moderate prices. In carefully tending fruit, especially managed orchards, said Mr. Sampson, 'The vast majority is the conservation of high grade fruit and the assurance of a reasonable price for green fruit.'

"Montana does not have a single cannery or evaporator within her territory. Nevertheless, during 1913 Montana imported 60,000 cars of canned fruit, 10 per cent of which was peaches and pears. She imported 10 cars of apple cider, vinegar and 30 cars of sweet cider. She imported 125,000 cases of tomatoes, 1,000,000 cases of peas and 25,000 cases of a total of 285,000 cases of canned vegetables. No figures are obtainable as to her imports of dried and evaporated fruits and vegetables."

"Idaho in 1913 shipped out 115 cars of dried apples, 50 of dried peaches, 75 of dried fruit, 25 of canned berries, 100 of canned peaches, 100 of canned rhubarb and 10 of tea, but during that same year the same state imported 135 cases of dried apples, 75 of dried peaches, 100 of dried peaches, 100 of other dried fruits, and 950 of canned fruits and vegetables. Her imports were a total of 95 tons greater than her total export."

"Our present needs in the four States, as shown by excess of imports over exports, the national average increase of by-products consumption as shown by the report of the committee, and the waste of the State of California, all indicate a large waste of this material."

the Northwest at fair prices for our own manufactured products.

"Through the cooperation of our own railroads, wholesalers, retailers and buying agencies, however, by the stimulation of lumber, when trade, and with our present home Alaska needs, surely we can increase our consumption materially in our own home territory."

The committee finds a number of surprising things. Much fruit goes to waste in many northwestern towns and cities and the same variety of fruit canned or evaporated in California is found on the merchant's shelves in these same villages. Annually California imports great quantities of Royal Ann cherries, imports hundreds of tons of cranberry pears, and exports back to this country and the Canadian territory this fruit. Some districts let hundreds of tons of apples go to waste and import every pint of vinegar they use.

"Cord canning in the West is largely a waste of material. The committee recommends, shall be:

"First, to act in an advisory capacity to all districts contemplating establishing plants and to employ experts whose services are to be paid for by such districts."

"Second, to arrange for a central selling agency for the handling of by-products."

It is regarded as certain that no other event ever held in the Pacific Northwest accomplished so much in the way of educating the people about the varied uses of the apple as did the women's department of the apple show. Thousands of people witnessed the cooking demonstrations and heard the lectures given each morning, afternoon and evening by the instructors and students of Washington State College and University of Idaho by experts.

Attendance considered, this year's show was the most successful in its history. About 60,000 people paid their way into the spacious grounds located within two blocks of the business heart of Spokane.

"Therefore the committee unanimously agreed to call this convention today for the purpose of forming a central by-products organization whose functions, the committee recommends, shall be:

"First, to act in an advisory capacity to all districts contemplating establishing plants and to employ experts whose services are to be paid for by such districts."

"Second, to arrange for a central selling agency for the handling of by-products."

Prominent shares were sold moderately, with net losses at a point or more in the speculative favorites. Low bid prices were made in the later dealings, at which time United States Steel and Union Pacific were singled out by the bears. New Haven shares again showed marked weakness, declining 2 points abruptly to the mini-mun price of $9. With the exception of the several supplies of stocks and bonds in Montreal, the market in Lethbridge and Inver Central roads, some of which rose substantially on the old rumor of buying for Canadian Pacific control, the entire list was inclined to weaken. Another break in sterling exchange rates between London and Lethbridge was quoted since 1907 have rise to the belief that further imports of gold from Canada are under way. Probable participation by oil packers in the new French refinery, says the Lethbridge Herald, will further ease in and "the balance between the center and the west where the issue is being handled."

Further price advances in steel products confirm recent advices of increased activity in that trade. As for general merchandise, local and interior reports point to an increase of individual purchases. Jobbing centers also report better and more diversified distribution.

Forecasts of the weekly cash movement were slightly upset by the intervening holiday. Loans show an actual contraction of about $25,000.00. Demand deposits increasing by about $20,000,000 and reserves decreasing $4,118,000.

The bond market was irregular, with slight dealings except in issues named.

Total sales, par value, were $1,350,000.

United States coupon and registered 2s declined  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent on call during the week.

GIVING THE KICKER AN INNING

City Comes to Recognize That Ordinary Citizen Has as Much Right to a Voice in City Government as Those Who Have Political Pull

The right of the people to kick when they fail to get good service is something new in government. The politicians long ago learned to kick and make political capital out of their kicks, but for an ordinary man who never has been arrested, never run for office, never made a public speech, never quarreled with his wife, always paid his bills, and always did his work satisfactorily, provided for him to kick about the city government, State government, county government, or any other government.

That sort of man hurried away to work every morning, hurried back home every evening, and he had no time for kicks.

The department stores recognized long ago the inalienable right of man or woman to kick and have provided kicking clerks to whom customers can make complaints. The gas company, the electric light company and sometimes the street railway company provides a person to whom grievances can be told. Until recently the man who didn't like the way his city was run had nothing to do but wait for some leader running for office or some other ax to grind. This leader did all the kicking, got all the glory, and then ran for office or accomplished his ends.

But the theory that the ordinary man does not know as much about his individual rights as the Mayor or some other official has long been discarded. Men do have rights, and they have wisdom to know their rights.

A man who has been a shoe cobbler all his life has just about as much training to be Mayor as a man who has been making a fortune selling inflated real estate, yet when the honest shoe cobbler tries to run for Mayor the people view with alarm the audacity of such an ignorant fellow trying to get into the Mayor's chair.

With the discovery that the shoe-maker is a man of brains the kick board has its beginning. The whole thing started in the newspaper offices in New York, where the people were invited several years ago to write anything they wanted to tell to the papers. That was a novel idea in the least. Before that the editors were supposed to be the only people in the world who could write. For a common $15 a week clerk to be given space in the daily newspapers of New York to tell what he thought, soon showed that the world was well supplied with people with different ideas from the ones who are running the government. The idea of the people's column has now spread all over the country and every day hundreds of letters are written to the daily newspapers to make the government swing in one or the other direction. With that fact in mind, recent makers of city charters have tried to provide an outlet for these making complaints and the result has been better government because the whole people have better ideas than just the few. The new Charter for St. Louis, which has just been adopted, provides for a Board of Complaint. It is the newest city complaint organization in the United States and has a paid secretary whose only duty is to listen to complaints and make a list of them.

SECTION UNDER WHICH COMPLAINT BOARD WORKS.

The complaint board is provided for in the city's charter in the following language:

"It (the Complaint Board) shall receive complaints against any department, board, division, officer or employee of the city, or against any public utility corporation, and examine the same. It shall recommend to the proper city or State authorities any action deemed advisable."

Under the old regime the man with a grievance could never get a hearing unless he had some sort of political pull. And there was the other disadvantage that honest city officials and boards were constantly hampered in their work by complaints which they had no means of investigating or settling. Feeling the need of some definite clearing house for all complaints, both just and unjust, the framers of the new Charter called for suggestions from civic experts. They sent forth a junketing party, commissioned to collect ideas for municipal government from a score of American cities. The men who did the work of investigation were commanded to find an antidote for the kick disease which has long afflicted St. Louis. In Cincinnati something was found which offered a suggestion. That suggestion was developed, extended, enlarged and rendered concrete. It resulted in Article XIV, Section 2, of the Charter, which was submitted to the people and subsequently adopted. It provided for a board, consisting of three members and a secretary, the latter to handle all details of the office. It placed at the disposal of the board all the judicial and executive machinery of both city and State. No such board has been utilized in any other city, and to a certain degree its work is only an experiment. It is the purpose of Lewis T. Tume, Maurice J. Cassidy and Hanford Crawford to make this new department a model for other cities to copy. If it serves to prevent the machinery of city government from becoming clogged by thousands of protests and complaints, and if it gives the man with a real grievance an opportunity for swift redress, it will place St. Louis at the very head in the march toward civic perfection.

Among the first complaints received by the complaint board was one from a man who tried for years to get a neighbor to make his garage swing inward instead of outward. The complainant was employed in a position which kept him away from home until 10 o'clock at night. Going home in the dark he frequently would bump into the gate which was swinging out. If the gate had been locked or shut there would have been no trouble but every dark and rainy night the gate swung out across the walk and Mr. Complainant would bump into it.

He complained first to his neighbor to no avail. Then he complained to Edward G. Marsh, secretary of the city's complaint board. Marsh settled the matter by calling up the section on the telephone and asking him if he could not fix his gate to swing inward.

"When I was kicking about my gate," said Marsh, "I got along on terms of friendship with him. If you have a chance to talk to him after the gate is fixed I tell him how much you appreciate the efforts and if he should not fix it, tell me. I would like to see him and talk to him on terms of the best friendship. He seems willing to fix the gate."

"Oh, just as you say," said the gate owner. "I was thinking the gate needed changing myself. I have a neighbor who bumps into the gate every night and dark night. He has been kicking about the gate for several years but I never paid any attention to him because he always was so angry when he talked to me. I just left it that way to spite him, but if it is for the good of the city in general I'll change it."

The gate was fixed in good repair. The gate owner was very grateful. The gate was fixed in good repair. The gate owner was very grateful.

The man held the paper within a couple of inches of his eyes and contrived, after much squinting, to decipher the name. His glasses were an eighth of an inch thick, and at that his vision was not only very poor, when the secretary had listened to his complaint, he said:

"I'm afraid the forester's right, this time. You ought not to be trimming trees when your sight's as bad as that. You're likely to get a fall and cripple yourself for life. I think I can get you a job with a florist—work that doesn't call for such good sight."

The man had not thought of the personal danger, and the kick secretary did not so much as mention to him that his work was necessary and good, when he could not do the thing between dead and live branches at a distance of three feet. He, too, went away comforted.

The woman's case was different. She had had some plumbing done and it was unsatisfactory. She refused to pay the bill, and the plumber threatened to bring suit. What ought she to do about it? What were her rights? She had once been involved in a police court trial on a similar case, and had received a parody on justice. The secretary asked her to give him the details of the work.

"With my limited knowledge," he said, "I can see where the man has violated the building ordinance at two points. The thing for you to do is to take your complaint to the Building Commissioner's office. A plumber isn't going to monkey with the Building Commissioner. He'll come across when he knows you've got the goods on him."

While the complaint was yet on Mr. Marsh's desk, another and more perplexing one presented itself. It was not brought by the postman, but was presented in person by a very fat and very cross man. He had a grievance, and he knew what to do with it.

"I tried to get a job on the Fire Department, and they wouldn't take me," he spluttered. "I went up against this here Efficiency Board, and I could pass any old examination three times in a row, but they wouldn't take me. I was in the Fire Department when I was 15 years old, and I was a volunteer fire corps in my town when I was a kid, and I know I can do the work all right, but when I went in for my examination they didn't let me to pass a set of scales and doing sums in arithmetic. They made me fail and then a Greek paper and a lot of stuff like that, and my heart gave out on me and they rejected me."

"I'll tell you what to do," the man said, solemnly. "You go and have a good talk with that greaser. Tell him I said you were an honest man and I would let him let you along till you get your job back. Times are tough to be better pretty soon, and he ought not to treat you too hard."

time you respond to a call."

"But I'd be all right after I'd trained down a little," the man said.

"Then suppose you go and train down and try the examination again, since you know what's expected of you."

It was a happy suggestion, and the man went his way, grinning. He was met in the corridor by a delegation of ladies who came to complain of the condition of some vacant lots in their neighborhood—lots that were allowed to grow up in weeds during the summer and that were a greater menace during the winter, when the snow was never removed from the pavement in front of them. Mr. Marsh listened to their protest and advised them as to the proper steps to take in bringing the offending owners to justice.

The Complaint Board has been the butt of many jokes since its organization. Newspapers have written funny stories about it. But the jokes at the expense of the Complaint Board have served to attract the attention of the people to ask what the board was and to talk about it.

But for the jokes and the talk, most of the people would have gone in ignorance of the board's existence.

Child Waste.

That a government physician will attend the birth of every child in the United States is a result of the scientific knowledge we are acquiring was one of the striking pictures presented by Prof. Charles Zuehlke.

"We already impose a penalty for failure to report a death," the speaker said. "If it is concealed we look into the matter and suspect a crime. Surely it is more of a crime not to get children into the world properly."

"Let one have any kind of private physician, he or she, who is desired," he said. "But let us have the government physician present also. One-fourth of the children do not come into the world who should. Another one-fourth do not live after the first year. Is not this a terrible indictment, showing that we do not husband our human resources properly?"

"There is another condition that must come. It is a crime for mothers to face the event in poverty and the future generations will not allow this. Penalties through insurance, State aid or some other method will insure every child who comes into the world proper care and the mother proper protection from poverty."

It is impossible to be a parent even in this age of a perfect science. A parent there is no excuse for the failure of a child. We do not know how many persons there are in this country. We do not distribute human beings in the country to get the best results for all concerned. We trust too much to luck.

There must be organization to obtain the best results, especially among municipal workers. The necessity for an organization for each group of workers to maintain their standard of living and to improve their methods are to those of other organizations. They attempt monopolize in their trade through trust unions. The trade union has done more than any other agency in advancing a movement wage, a minimum standard of work hours and proper standards of sanitation and education.

Today is coming when we will have a new kind of union, one that will take care of the needs of all, from the child of the poorest to the child of the richest. It will be a union that will take care of the needs of all, from the child of the poorest to the child of the richest.

A Reputation.

"I don't see what he expects to gain by hooting at everything."

"A reputation for wisdom, perhaps; like the owl."
